SENATE ACTION ON RELIEF BILL IS SEEN TODAY

Air Is Cleared by Hyde's View That Fund May Be Used for Food.

20-24 STILL OPPOSE $20,000,000 SCHEME

Democrats Lose Political Gains in Compromise Through Protests.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

The Senate is expected to vote today on the food compromise whereby $20,000,000 is to be made available for loans to the drought-stricken farmers.

Secretary of Agriculture Hyde clarified the atmosphere yesterday in a telegram from Louisville, Ky., saying the loans could be used for food and medical supplies, but pointing out that they were not intended primarily as food loans. That is to say, it is not intended for these loans to supplant the work of the Red Cross, but they are intended, on the other hand, to extend credit facilities to responsible farmers who are embarrassed in the financing of their next year's crop because of bank failures and other curtailments of credit facilities.

The Red Cross will continue to feed the class of farmers whose problem is not withdrawn credit facilities, but stark hunger. The responsible class, receiving loans by giving a lien on the crop they expect to make this year, will be able to do what they please with the money, Hyde's telegram and any accepted understanding of the situation makes clear.

Borah Is Satisfied.

Hyde's telegram was clear enough for Senator Borah, who described it as satisfactory, but Senator Norris likened it to the Wickersham report. It took considerable fire out of the opposition to the compromise, however, and not more than 22 or 24 votes are expected to be registered against it today.

In the meantime, the Democrats have lost politically everything they gained by the compromise, because of the insistence of several of their number that it was a complete surrender. This is exactly what the House Republican forces have contended publicly, and the impression they would like to have to prevail.

As a matter of plain fact, the Democrats get just exactly what they started out to get, only $5,000,000 more. Their original proposal, voted once before Christmas and once just afterward, and twice denied by the House, called for an appropriation of $15,000,000 for loans to the farmers. When the House rejected the proposition the second time, Senator Robinson, pressed by his followers, proposed a $25,000,000 appropriation to the Red Cross and declared either it or something akin to it would be accepted or there would be an extra session.

Accept Original Plan.

There was a nervous period of watchful waiting when even the Democratic press gave the Democrats an awful razzing, warning them they would never get into the White House acting that way. Beads of perspiration came to stand on Robinson's brow and those of other Democratic leaders.

The opportunity for a compromise afforded itself and the Democrats fell back and compromised on their original demand. It looked as if they had come out with flying colors, until some of them, for varying reasons, began to term the compromise as an abject surrender for the Democrats. They played right into the administration's hands.

Insofar as the Progressives are concerned and several of the Democratic objectors, for that matter, they want an extra session. The Progressives went to the aid of Robinson gleefully on the $25,000,000 proposition, thinking it provided a deadlock and an extra session. They are now chagrined over the compromise.

Objects to Compromise.

The attitude of Senator Glass is inexplicable. He is against an extra session and was reluctant to go along with Robinson in his threat for one. Yet he has been the most formidable Democratic influence against acceptance of the compromise, and has been most emphatic in describing it as an abject surrender.

He makes the point that a starving farmer can not give any security for a loan, as prescribed in the agreement. He is right, but this would have been the situation under the original Democratic demand. There has been so much confusion connected with the whole business that no one knows exactly where he is.

Scarlet Fever Appears In Ohio Drought Area

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Tuscarawas County is the first of the 27 counties in the Ohio drought area to show disturbing presence of communicable disease, the habitual enemy of relief forces wherever privation and want exist.

Many cases of scarlet fever and some of influenza have stirred the State Health Department and the officials of Tuscarawas County into a campaign against an epidemic. Disease has not reached epidemic proportions there yet and preventive steps have been taken.

Victim Wrests Gun Away and Race Follows; Crowd Joins.

Hundreds of persons watched the flight of a young holdup man along busy F street last night as the man was pursued by his intended victim, who had taken the bandit's gun away.

The man who was captured gave his name as Joseph Wilson, 22 years old, of Detroit, Mich. His captor was Dick Harlow, of 1024 Twenty-fifth street northwest, who was passing and who joined the crowd which pursued the alleged bandit.

Wilson was captured on F street near Twelfth street, after a chase

EFFORT TO DECEIVE U. S. LAID TO BLAINE

ACT HELD "DELIBERATE"

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Blaine, of the Senate postal lease investigating committee, was charged last night by Postmaster General Brown with using "the cloak of his senatorial immunity" in a "deliberate" attempt to deceive the American public into believing there has been widespread fraud in postoffice leases.

"The senator has not a scintilla of evidence to support such a charge," Brown said, in a formal statement.

The Postmaster General denied that beneficiaries of the postal leases have contributed a million and a quarter dollars to the Coolidge and Hoover campaign funds, asserting that although they number many thousands they have contributed "the insignificant sum of $500" to Republican campaign funds since 1924.

Brown's bristling statement was issued just 24 hours after his appearance before the Blaine committee when his refusal to furnish records of the Postoffice Department resulted in several sharp verbal clashes with the committee chairman.

Referring to this incident, he said: "Senator Blaine now charges the present administration of the Postoffice Department with failure to cooperate with his committee.

"The fact is that the department has afforded Senator Blaine's agents and investigators every facility for doing their work.

"It has made available to them the complete files concerning all existing lease contracts. It will continue to make such records available.

"The department does not intend, however, to make any disclosures of information which is related only to its future policies, and which, if made public prematurely would embarrass

SCHWAB OPTIMISTIC OVER CUBA'S FUTURE

Bethlehem Steel President Says Firm Is Satisfied With Machado's Rule.

WILL EXPAND INTEREST

Havana, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, told President Gerardo Machado today he had implicit confidence in the future of Cuba, and his company intended an extensive expansion of its activities in the republic.

A friendship of more than 30 years, dating back before Cuba was a republic, caused the president personally to invite the steel man to the palace, and the two reminisced for nearly an hour.

After the chat Mr. Schwab said:

"I told the president I had implicit confidence in this country and in our ability to continue conducting our affairs under his very efficient administration.

"Bethlehem Steel has large investments here. We take more than 2,000,000 tons of iron and chrome ore from Cubah mines each year and are increasing the total annually. I think I was therefore somewhat qualified to speak for American interests in telling President Machado that Americans with interests here were entirely satisfied with the treatment accorded Americans under his administration, and that we appreciated his

W. E. Hope Mentioned As Hibben's Successor

New York, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—The Times says friends of Walter E. Hope have been informed he will resign as Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury, to resume the practice of law.

Mr. Hope, who was Eastern vice treasurer of the Republican national committee in the 1928 campaign, is mentioned as a possible successor to John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University. Mr. Hope is a Princeton graduate.

City Detective Suspended; Attack on Woman Claimed

Sixth Precinct Attache Alleged to Have Torn Dress of Drug Store Patron and Pulled Buttons off Coats; Freed on Bail.

Sidney E. Miles, Sixth Precinct detective assigned to duty at Union Station, was suspended and charged with assault following a drug store escapade last night during which he allegedly attempted to tear the dress from a woman patron.

Mrs. Margaret Henderson and her husband, Walter, had entered the drug store in the Harris Hotel, 17 Massachusetts avenue, to make a purchase. Shortly afterward, Mr. Henderson stepped outside with the manager, R. E. Johnson, leaving his wife in the shop with Mr. Johnson's brother, Alfred E., who is a clerk, and several customers.

A few minutes later Miles, a 6-footer and built in proportion, entered and in a loud voice demanded to see the manager. Told that he was out, the detective is said to have gone from one patron to another, tearing buttons off their clothes. When he reached Mrs. Henderson he attempted to tear away her dress, according to the report.

While several men customers in the establishment tried to pull Miles off, Alfred E. Johnson ran into the street and summoned Traffic Policeman C. A. Musselman, who arrested the detective and took him to the precinct station.

Miles was on duty when the incident occurred. He was suspended by Lieut. J. H. Lee and released on $25 collateral, after being booked for assault.

PONTIFF URGES PEACE IN FIRST RADIO ADDRESS

Millions Hear Pope Pius Dedicate Station at Vatican.

EXAMPLE OF CHRIST ASKED OF LISTENERS

Church Head Also Speaks at Science Academy and Honors Marconi.

Vatican City, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Radio, invention of the twentieth century, carried the age old Latin of Pope Pius XI to the four corners of the world today, and millions of listeners heard the first papal broadcast in history.

The Pope, himself the most modern of all pontiffs in thought and action, blessed the new invention and, in a message marked by a fervent keynote of peace and cooperation, bestowed the apostolic benediction upon the world.

Twice during the day his holiness spoke to the microphone. His first address, in Latin, dedicated the new Vatican radio station, presented him by Senator Guglielmo Marconi, "father" of wireless telephony.

Speaks to All Classes.

In it he spoke to all classes, to the members of his hierarchy and to his followers, to dissidents, to workers and employers, to the rich and the poor, the persecuted and afflicted.

To millions of Catholics he became, through the medium of the ether waves, for the first time a living personage in a personal way. They heard his clear, earnest voice in their own room and offices, a voice to hear which uncounted pilgrims in the last nine years have journeyed uncounted miles.

To all he suggested the example of Christ and asked them to help one another and to enrich their lives with Christian peace and charity.

Later the pontiff presided at the ceremony of the pontifical academy of sciences and welcomed Senator Marconi personally as a member. Then he conferred upon him the Papal Grand Cross, one of the highest honors in his powers to bestow.

Scientist Also Heard.

Senator Marconi and Father Gianfrancheschi, director of the new radio station and a scientist of note, who accompanied Gen. Umberto Nobile on his first expedition to the Arctic, spoke briefly.

Then Mgr. Francis J. Spellman, of Boston, Mass., delivered the English translation.

The Pope's second speech was in Italian and Mgr. Spellman's translation was made under high pressure, since His Holiness did not have the written speech ready until late in the morning.

On his first appearance before the microphone Pope Pius was wreathed in smiles and apparently in the best of health. He walked about the station and inspected everything with boyish eagerness. He was not content with formal explanations and repeatedly asked Senator Marconi for additional information.

Pontiff Seemed at Ease.

The pontiff took his seat on a gilded red damask throne before the microphone with the nonchalance of a veteran announcer. Once in a while, however, he forgot himself far enough to make a little gesture of raising his right hand and letting it down sharply on his knee to accentuate his points.

He did not hesitate when Senator Marconi moved the microphone into position, but immediately plunged into his discourse.

WHOLE WHEAT LOAF PRICE IS CUT ONE CENT

Concession Made During Senate Probe Into Food Costs.

PLAN TO LOWER WHITE BREAD RATES REFUSED

Firm Says Margin Is Small, but Other Sees Profit at 5 Cents Per Pound.

Reduction of 1 cent a loaf in the price of whole wheat bread sold by his company was promised yesterday by M. Lee Marshall, chairman of the board of the Continental Baking Co.

The reduction will be effective Monday in Washington and other cities where the Continental Baking Co. operates, Mr. Marshall said.

Announcement of the price cut was made during his testimony before the special Senate food price investigating committee, of which Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, is chairman.

The promise came at the end of a series of questions and answers, in the course of which Senator Capper drew from the witness that Washington was one of the cities in which his company operates where there was a discrepancy between the price of whole wheat and white flour bread.

Cent Cut Would Mean Loss.

Senator Capper sought to press the baker to promise a reduction of at least 1 cent on a pound loaf of bread, in all classes, but he refused to do so. He said if the present price of white bread was reduced 1 cent a loaf it would mean that his company would lose money on every loaf sold. Its profits, Mr. Marshall said, were now .69 of a cent a loaf.

Mr. Marshall and other representatives of the baking industry denied that their profits were excessive. They all protested that labor costs in Washington were among the highest in any city in the country.

"Yes, that may be," Senator Capper said, "but that doesn't mean much, because you are making the public pay for it."

"I don't know whether that is true or not," said Leon S. Ulman, vice president, treasurer and part owner of Holmes & Sons, a local baking company.

Say Profits Not Large.

Mr. Ulman, Mr. Marshall, Frank W. Wheeler, representing the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., of New York, and Alvin E. Dodd, representing the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., joined in the statement that their companies were not making large profits on bread.

E. A. Wireback, of the American Stores Co., which has 40 stores in Washington, however, said that his company was selling a 5-cent pound loaf of bread in its stores. This bread cost 5.21 cents a loaf to make and distribute to the stores, Mr. Wireback said, explaining that the price had been reduced from 6 to 5 cents a loaf in Washington to conform with the company's prices in other cities.

The loss suffered by his company was attributed to high cost of distribution rather than to cost of labor and raw materials by Mr. Wireback. If his bakery produced more the cost would be cut down per loaf, he explained.

The 5-cent bread was of good quality and did not contain a patented ingredient which holds a higher percentage of water and thereby reduces the amount of flour and other ingredients in a loaf, Mr. Wireback said. If his company had a larger distribution in Washington, he contended, it could show a profit, as it has a

Calvin Coolidge Says:

By a remarkable coincidence the Treasury representatives of two opposite poles of political thought, Ogden Mills in the United States and Philip Snowden in Great Britain, simultaneously reach the same conclusions concerning governmental finance. Both say that heavy expenditures will cause a deficit at the end of the fiscal year and that their respective governments can not go on increasing appropriations without incurring disagreeable consequences in the way of increased taxes. Yet it seems almost impossible to prevent the general run of legislators from thinking that when finances are depressed we can relieve ourselves by taxing ourselves.

By implication, Chancellor Snowden indorses the same method advocated by so many of our domestic relievers. His inference is that by our reducing its debt to us Great Britain should have been or should now be relieved out of the Treasury of the United States.

Because our Government was able to reduce its debt and its taxes, our problem is not so acute as that of the British. But it differs in degree, not in kind. Particular and temporary support for people in distress can be paid out of public funds but relief from domestic or international economic depression can not be provided by the National Treasury.

HOUSE BODY UPHOLDS LOANS OF $700,000,000 IN NEW BONUS PLAN

Address Made by Hoover On Birthday of Lincoln

The text of President Hoover's address on Lincoln's Birthday is as follows:

By the magic of the radio I am able to address several hundred public gatherings called this evening throughout our country in celebration of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

It is appropriate that I should speak from this room in the White House where Lincoln strived and accomplished his great service to our country.

His invisible presence dominates these halls, ever recalling that infinite patience and that indomitable will which fought and won the fight for those firmer foundations and greater strength to government by the people. From these windows he looked out upon that great granite shaft which was then in construction to mark the country's eternal tribute to the courage and uncompromising strength of the founder of this Union of States.

Here are the very chairs in which he meditated upon his problems. Above the mantelpiece hangs his portrait with his Cabinet, and upon this fireplace is written:

"In this room Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation of January 1, 1863, whereby 4,000,000 slaves were given their freedom and slavery forever prohibited in these United States.".

It was here that he toiled by day and by night that the Union created by the fathers might be preserved and that slavery might be ended.

Most of the business of this room in Lincoln's time was concerned with the conduct of war against destructive forces. From here he could oft Advances Up to 50 Per Cent on Certificates Favored.

LONGWORTH SAYS BILL WILL PASS

Six Months Required to Put Law in Operation, Hawley Declares.

(Associated Press.

A compromise proposal to increase loans on veterans' service certificates from 22½ to 50 per cent with interest charges reduced to 4½ per cent was unanimously agreed upon yesterday by the House ways and means committee.

The proposal is expected to involve an outlay of $700,000,000, if 50 per cent of the veterans apply for funds it would make available. Should the 3,500,000 veterans seek loans, the measure would call for $1,711,500,000, less present loans of $325,000,000.

Speaker Longworth and other House Republican leaders indicated that the measure would be brought up for consideration Monday under rules that would insure its passage without amendment.

Source of Bonus.

Under the plan, which was introduced late yesterday by Chairman Hawley of the committee, the funds could be drawn from the $772,000,000 sinking fund on the certificates maturing in 1945, and from the $50,000,000 remaining of the $312,000,000 life insurance fund.

The measure does not limit the loans to those in need. It merely broadens the existing adjusted compensation loan act provisions, making it possible for veterans already having loans to more than double the amount at reduced interest rates.

Chairman Hawley said it would require about six months for the veterans' administration to put the plan into full operation.

Work of All-Day Session.

The agreement was reached after an all-day session behind closed doors. Previously the committee voted down proposals to pay the face and cash values of the certificates, and a proposal also offered by Hawley to increase loans 40 per cent and restrict them to the needy.

The committee expects to report formally the bill to the House today.

Speaker Longworth approved the compromise.

"I consider it a very fortunate settlement," he said. "I do not believe it will involve great difficulty in financing. It will provide greatly needed assistance to the veterans."

Financing Up to Treasury.

Chairman Rawley said the committee left the method of financing the loans to the Treasury, but M ority Leader Garner said it would not necessitate any bond issue. He said should the sinking fund be exhausted, additional loans could be financed through short term Treasury certificates at low rates of interest. Mr. Garner offered the 50 per cent plan which was adopted.

Representative Bacharach (Republican), New Jersey, who initiated the loan plan modified yesterday, said it "positively would not require a bond issue."

The Treasury has opposed relief measures which would require a bond issue of sizable proportions.

In a statement last night on the measure, Veterans Administrator Hines said the gross borrowing power for all certificates now in force would be $1,711,500,000.

Limit of Borrowing.

"Bearing in mind the fact that, approximately $325,000,000 has to date been loaned on the certificates," Mr. Hines added, "the net additional potential amount it will be possible for veterans to borrow will approximate $1,386,500,000.

"How much of this amount will actually be borrowed will depend upon the extent to which veterans will avail themselves of the extended loan privileges.

"In other words, if the bill becomes a law, it more than doubles the loan

TRIBUTE TO LINCOLN IS LED BY HOOVER

Superstate Tendency Would Have Met Emancipator's Frown, Chief Says.

ADDRESS IS BROADCAST

Increases in Federal powers can lead but to the superstate, where every man becomes the servant of the state, and real liberty is lost, President Hoover declared last night as he led the Nation in a tribute to Abraham Lincoln from the White House study, fraught with memories of the Great Emancipator, who did most of his work there during the Civil War.

Such a superstate was not the kind of government Abraham Lincoln sought to build, President Hoover declared.

President Hoover's address, which was broadcast over two large radio chains, climaxed a day of observance in the Capital. While business was not suspended and no organized program was carried out here, various groups conducted services in honor of the 122d anniversary of Lincoln's birth.

Patriotic orders, schools, churches and other bodies paused to pay tribute. In the public schools assemblies were called and teachers spoke to the pupils on Lincoln's life and ideals.

Government officials were leaders in observance of the day. Senators Smoot and Shortridge eulogized Lincoln on the Senate floor. Vice President Curtis, Secretary of Interior Wilbur and Secretary of Labor Doak addressed a meeting of the trustees of Lincoln Memorial University, while Theodore G. Risley, solicitor of the Department of Labor, addressed a meeting at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, where Lincoln once worshiped, as part of a national program sponsored by the Republican national committee.

"Of all the great dead who have spoken the English language, Shakespeare and Lincoln now exert the widest influence on mankind and of them more has been written and spoken than any other men who have lived, not excepting Caesar or Napoleon," Mr. Risley declared.

Vice President Curtis, speaking at a luncheon celebrating Lincoln's birthday and the anniversary of the founding of Lincoln Memorial University at Harrogate, Tenn., denounced biographers who would "ruin the memories of their victims."

"These men may get on the front pages for a day," he said, "but they

HOOVER ASKS ACTION ON NAVAL PROGRAM

Adams Informs G.O.P. Leaders President Is Eager for Passage This Session.

COVERS MODERNIZATION

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Adams told House Republican leaders yesterday President Hoover was anxious to have favorable action this session on the naval construction program, along with battleship modernization.

Calling personally on Speaker Longworth and Chairman Britten, of the House naval committee, the naval chief said he desired to remove any impression that the administration was not desirous of pressing the legislation at this session.

"I am very hopeful for the construction program," Mr. Adams said. He said the impression that the administration did not want the construction program probably arose because it had urged that the modernization program and the Britten officer promotion measure be acted on first.

With this view clarified, House leaders intimated the building bill, calling for an outlay of $74,000,000 for ships under the London Naval Treaty, and the $30,000,000 battleship modernization program would be brought up for early action. The Senate has passed the modernization bill to authorize remodeling of the battleships Idaho, Mississippi and New Mexico.

Mr. Adams made his visit while the House was engrossed in reading the $344,000,000 annual supply bill, which is expected to be passed tomorrow.

Overriding the recommendations of the appropriations committee, the House eliminated the provision limiting the number of officers to 5,499, making it possible to give commissions to the 1931 graduating class of the Naval Academy.

Mr. Britten served notice that the provision reducing congressional appointments of midshipmen from four to three would be increased in the Senate to five, so that when the measure went to conference the provision for four could be restored as a compromise.

After a brief flare-up over the ships to be decommissioned under the London naval treaty the House accepted an amendment appropriating $779,000 to convert the battleship Wyoming into a training ship and the Utah into a radio-controlled target.

President Hoover sent a recommendation for an appropriation of $4,420,000 for naval public works previously authorized and partly provided for in a deficiency measure.

25,737 Families Get Aid In 20 States' Drought Areas

Red Cross Expects Rapid Decline in Need Next Month; New Mexico Emergency Ends; Pleas Made on Air for $2,500,000 to Fill Fund.

(Associated Press.)

The first complete Red Cross report of all drought areas, tabulated yesterday at national headquarters, showed 255,737 families receiving aid in 735 counties of 20 States, at the beginning of this month.

Census Bureau statistics over many decades show an average of four and a fraction persons per family, which would bring the number of those being fed above 1,000,000.

But Red Cross officials said the peak probably would be passed in February, and March would show a rapid decline in demands, since Federal loans then would be effective and seasonal employment would be opening.

Already the temporary emergency has been cleared in New Mexico, which had completed the list of 21 States hard hit by the drought.

With 113,768 families receiving food, clothing and other relief, Arkansas was by far the most famine-stricken State. Louisiana came second with 35,409 families.

Word pictures of the need behind the Red Cross appeal for a $10,000,000 drought-relief fund went by radio last night to the South, the East and the Nation's Capital.

Gov. Harvey Parnell, of Arkansas; Gov. Norman S. Case, of Rhode Island, and Judge John Barton Payne, Red Cross chairman, participated in a special program urging the raising of

Virgin Island Group Visits President Hoover

(Associated Press.)

A committee from the Virgin Islands called on President Hoover yesterday to thank him for his interest in the islands and for the establishment of civil government there. They said they did not discuss with him their plea that the islands be permitted to resume manufacture of rum for export.

The committee members were D. H. Jackson, Joseph Alexander, Dr. D. C. Canegata and H. Berg. They were accompanied by Herbert Brown, chief of the Bureau of Efficiency, who has taken a large part in the working out of plans for the establishment of civil government.

$50,000 to Fete French Veterans Is Favored

(Associated Press.)

A $50,000 appropriation for the entertainment of French World War veterans who will hold their fourteenth annual convention here during celebration of the George Washington Bicentennial next year, was approved yesterday by the House foreign affairs committee. The Frenchmen will meet in Washington in September, 1932, the month in which Gen. Lafayette was born.

Assistant Secretary of State Carr advised the House committee that the department "has received a request for an appropriation from sources," but added "the thought the celebration deserved congressional support."

W. C. T. U. Scores Juices for Wines

Grape Concentrate Mildly Rapped by Prohibition Body.

Wine grape concentrate, legally represented by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, and financed by the United States Government, was the subject of modified condemnation in a statement issued from national headquarters of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union here yesterday.

"We are promoting the use of unfermented fruit juices," explains the prohibition organization, "but believe they should be preserved from fermentation in the same way canned fruit is preserved.

"The attempt to promote the sale of any grape juice or concentrate by selling it in five or ten gallon kegs, with or without instructions for making it into wine, makes it easy to secure fermented wine for home consumption, and has our disapproval. The alcohol forms in the open keg or barrel, and the drinker consumes an increasing amount."

Hoover Requests Fund For Work on Air Base

Steps to provide for early construction of the newly authorized $5,000,000 naval dirigible base at Sunnyvale, Calif. were taken yesterday by President Hoover in recommending Congress make available immediately $2,200,000 for initial work.

IRATE DENIAL HURLED AT BLAINE BY BROWN

and handicap the transaction of public business."

Characterizing the Government's past policy of renting postoffice quarters as "wasteful and extravagant in the extreme," Brown said every Postmaster General for the last fifteen years had urged Congress to provide for acquisition and ownership of such buildings.

The Blaine committee, he said, could have aided in enacting legislation to this end. But, he continued, "its energies have been devoted to efforts to discover fraud and corruption in the inception of certain lease contracts made many years ago, particularly the St. Paul Commercial Station lease, upon which the department nearly three years ago suspended rental payments pending a judicial determination of the controversies involved."

Referring to Blaine's announcement he would attempt to prove lessors had contributed a million and a quarter dollars to Republican campaign funds, Brown said:

"The precise fact is that postoffice lessors, numbering many thousand in the aggregate, have contributed to the Republican national campaign funds from 1924 to the present time the insignificant sum of $500.

"Unquestionably," he continued, "these and other similar statements made by Senator Blaine under the cloak of his senatorial immunity are in pursuance of a deliberate purpose to deceive the American people into believing that there has been widespread fraud and corruption in the making of postoffice leases, although the senator has not a scintilla of evidence to support such a charge."

will not last long and their efforts will not succeed."

Senator Smoot also spoke along this line in his address on the Senate floor, declaring that "critics and cynics have beaten in vain against the shrine Abraham Lincoln occupies in every American heart."

At the Lincoln Memorial University luncheon a message in eulogy of Lincoln which came from President Masaryk of Czechoslovakia was read by Ferdinand Veverka, minister of that country. "I have always loved Lincoln and learned from him," President Masaryk's message read. "He is one of the eternal lights of freedom in darkness of egotism, sentimentality and political superstitutions."

Wilbur Adds Tribute.

Secretary Wilbur in his speech emphasized the accomplishment of Lincoln in obtaining an education despite almost insurmountable handicaps.

Secretary Doak declared that Lincoln "came from the ranks of those who toil, and not only held in high esteem the people from whom he came, but dignified and glorified labor because he had a part in it."

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, called for a greater respect for law by people of today in line with the teachings of Lincoln.

Bennett Joins in Praise.

Ira Bennett, editor of The Washington Post, said the true memorial to Lincoln is the United States. "To only one man was given the opportunity to save the Union," he declared, "but to all Americans is given the opportunity to perpetuate it."

An endowment drive for $10,000,000 for the university was announced by Dr. John Wesley Hill, chancellor.

The Grand Army of the Republic observed anniversary last night at the First Congregational Church, with E. W. Gibson and E. C. Moore as speakers.

Davis Eulogizes Memory.

The remarks of Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, before the annual convention of the Marine Engineer Beneficial Association, which convened at the Lee House, eulogized the memory of Lincoln as a blazer of trails "toward an era of electrical and mechanical perfection which has uplifted the standards of living on land and sea."

Senator Davis declared that, although Lincoln's influence on mechanical progress was indirect, it was nevertheless obvious in that the Emancipator, in freeing the slaves who had contributed the labor in the United States, instigated the mind of man to cope with the slaveless situation and find machinery to take their place.

To further commemorate the memory of the Civil War President an address was sent out over the Columbia network from the very room in which Lincoln died, in the building across the street from Ford's Theater where he was shot by Booth. The address was delivered by Lewis G. Reynolds, custodian of the collection of Lincoln relics which have been placed in the building.

Treasured Articles Described.

Mr. Reynolds described to his listeners several of the treasured articles now stored in the museum, and also told of several additions which have been made within the past few months. One of these was a copy of the marriage certificate of Thomas and Nancy Hanks Lincoln, Abraham's father and mother, a document for which the President himself diligently searched, but never found, according to Mr. Reynolds, the document, together with a record of the Rev. Jesse Head having married the backwoods couple, was located in Washington County.

One of the main exercises of the day was held at noon at the Lincoln Memorial under the auspices of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. Representative Hamilton Fish was the principal speaker, and dozens of patriotic organizations took part. Representatives of the various orders placed wreaths on the memorial.

Religious Faith Defended.

The religious faith of Abraham Lincoln was stoutly defended at memorial exercises held at American University, by Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

"Never has the nation had a leader who was more profoundly affected by the teachings of the Bible, prayer and the sense of the soverignty of God," he declared.

A score or more of cabinet members, Government officials and party leaders spoke over radio hookups in various cities, immediately preceding the address of President Hoover, as part of the program sponsored by the Republican national committee. Secretary of Agriculture Hyde spoke before the microphone at Louisville, Ky.; Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, spoke at Meadville, Pa.; Assistant Attorney General Seth W. Richardson, at Toledo, and Executive Director Robert H. Lucas, of the National Republican committee, at Nashville.

which had led around the block from 508 Twelfth street, where he and a companion had attempted to rob Clement E. Atkinson. Mr. Atkinson, who had just seated himself in his car when approached by the pair, struggled with Wilson, who held the gun. Gaining possession of the weapon, he pursued Wilson, who separated from his companion.

The chase led down Twelfth, along E, up Thirteenth and along F street to Twelfth, through throngs who stopped to watch the pursuit. Police cars, summoned by radio, arrived a few seconds after the capture.

Mr. Atkinson is proprietor of a barber shop at 508 Twelfth street. He had just closed the place and gotten into his car when the two men tapped on the glass. He opened the door and Wilson thrust the gun at him and told him to move over. When the young man was in the car, Mr. Atkinson grabbed his hand and twisted his wrist until the gun dropped out.

The pair then attacked him with their fists until he got out of the car, when they fled. The chase and capture followed. Mr. Atkinson was carrying only about $10 when he put up the fight with the two men. Wilson was taken to the First Precinct Station, but no charge had been placed against him pending an investigation.

Text of Hoover Address On Birthday of Lincoln

hear the sound of approaching cannon, and yet the thought that he should desert his place, this city and this house, never entered into his considerations. Lincoln was a builder in an epoch of destruction. It was his assignment by Providence to restore the national edifice, so badly shattered in its social and economic structure that it had well-nigh failed. His undying idealism and inflexible resolve builded a new temple of the national soul in which our succeeding generations have since dwelt secure and free and of a richer life.

And if Lincoln could today resurvey the scene of his country he would find a Union more solidly knit and more resolute in its common purpose than ever in its history. He would find the States of the South recovered from the wounds of war, inspired by the splendid leadership of a new generation to a brilliant renaissance of industry and culture.

Was Great Prophet.

He would indeed find the consummation of that great moving appeal of his inaugural in which he said: "The mystic chords of memory stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land will yet swell the chorus of the Union when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature." It was indeed a great prophecy.

If Lincoln were living, he would find that this race of liberated slaves, starting a new life without a shred but the clothes in which they stood, without education, without organization, has today by its own endeavors progressed to an amazingly high level of self-reliance and well-being. To Lincoln it would have been incredible that within a lifetime the millions of children of these slaves would be graduating from the public schools and colleges, that the race could have builded itself homes and accumulated itself a wealth in lands and savings; that it should have carried on with success every calling and profession in our country.

While the dramatic period of Lincoln's life was engrossed with these tremendous problems, yet he was a man of many interests. He was a believer in party government. He realized, as we also must realize, that fundamentally our whole self-government is conceived and born of majority rule, and to enable the majority to express itself we must have party organization. Lincoln led in founding the Republican party and he gloried in his party. His tradition has dominated it to this day. It was and is a party of responsibility; it was and is a party of the Constitution.

Some Problems Still Alive.

While many of the issues of that time are dead and gone, some of our present problems were equally vivid in his day. You will find Lincoln addressing the country in strong and urgent support of the protective tariff with vivid declamation against the party opposing that policy. You will find him advocating Federal Government aid in internal development of waterways, rivers and harbors, and transportation. You will find him pounding at the public mind against nullification and for adherence to constitutional processes of government. No stronger statement has ever been made than that of Lincoln upon obedience to law as the very foundation of our Republic.

In Lincoln's day the dominant problem in our form of government turned upon the issue of States' rights. Though less pregnant with disaster, the dominant problem today in our form of government turns in large degree upon the issue of the relationship of Federal, State and local government responsibilities. We are faced with unceasing agitation that the Federal Government shall assume new financial burdens, that it shall undertake increased burdens in regulation of abuses and in the prosecution of crime.

It is true that since Lincoln's time many forces have swept across State borders and have become more potent than the State or local community can deal with alone either financially or by jurisdiction. Our concept of Federal, State and local responsibilities is possible of no unchanged definitions, and it must shift with the moving forces of the Nation, but the time has come when we must have more national consideration and decision of the part which each shall assume in these responsibilities.

For Local Government.

The Federal Government has assumed many new responsibilities since Lincoln's time, and will probably assume more in the future when the States and local communities can not alone cure abuse or bear the entire cost of national programs, but there is an essential principle that should be maintained in these matters. I am convinced that where Federal action is essential then in most cases it should limit its responsibilities to supplement the States and local communities, and that it should not assume the major role or the entire responsibility, in replacement of the States or local government. To do otherwise threatens the whole foundations of local government, which is the very basis of self-government.

The moment responsibilities of any community, particularly in economic and social questions, are shifted from any part of the Nation to Washington, then that community has subjected itself to a remote bureaucracy structure that it had well-nigh failed. His undying idealism and inflexible resolve builded a new temple of the national soul in which our succeeding generations have since dwelt secure and free and of a richer life.

Our concept of Federal, State and local responsibilities is possible of no unchanged definitions, and it must shift with the moving forces of the Nation, but the time has come when we must have more national consideration and decision of the part which each shall assume in these responsibilities.

For Local Government.

The Federal Government has assumed many new responsibilities since Lincoln's time, and will probably assume more in the future when the States and local communities can not alone cure abuse or bear the entire cost of national programs, but there is an essential principle that should be maintained in these matters. I am convinced that where Federal action is essential then in most cases it should limit its responsibilities to supplement the States and local communities, and that it should not assume the major role or the entire responsibility, in replacement of the States or local government. To do otherwise threatens the whole foundations of local government, which is the very basis of self-government.

The moment responsibilities of any community, particularly in economic and social questions, are shifted from any part of the Nation to Washington, then that community has subjected itself to a remote bureaucracy with its minimum of understanding and of sympathy. It has lost a large part of its voice and its control of its own destiny. Under Federal control the varied conditions of life in our country are forced into standard molds, with all their limitations upon life, either of the individual or the community. Where people divest themselves of local government responsibilities they at once lay the foundation for the destruction of their liberties.

And buried in this problem lies something even deeper. The whole of our governmental machinery was devised for the purpose that through ordered liberty we give incentive and equality of opportunity to every individual to rise to that highest achievement of which he is capable. At once when government is centralized there arises a limitation upon the liberty of the individual and a restriction of individual opportunity. The true growth of the nation is the growth of character in its citizens. The spread of government destroys initiative and thus destroys character. Character is made in the community as well as in the individual by assuming responsibilities, not by escape from them. Carried to its logical extreme, all this shouldering of individual and community responsibility upon the Government can lead but to the superstate where every man becomes the servant of the State and real liberty is lost. Such was not the government that Lincoln sought to build.

There is an entirely different avenue by which we may both resist this drift to centralize government and at the same time meet a multitude of problems. That is to strengthen in the Nation a sense and an organization of self-help and cooperation to solve as many problems as possible outside of government. We are today passing through a critical test in such a problem arising from the economic depression.

Prosperity Retarded.

Due to lack of caution in business and to the impact of forces from an outside world, one-half of which is involved in social and political revolution, the march of our prosperity has been retarded. We are projected into temporary unemployment, losses, and hardships. In a Nation rich in resources, many people were faced with hunger and cold through no fault of their own. Our national resources are not only material supplies and material wealth but a spiritual and moral wealth in kindliness, in compassion, in a sense of obligation of neighbor to neighbor and a realization of responsibility by industry, by business, and the community for its social security and its social welfare.

The evidence of our ability to solve great problems outside of Government action and the degree of moral strength with which we emerge from this period will be determined by whether the individual's and the local communities continue to meet their responsibilities.

Throughout this depression I have insisted upon organization of these forces through industry, through local government and through charity, that they should meet this crisis by their own initiative, by the assumption of their own responsibilities. The Federal Government has sought to do its part by example in the expansion of employment, by affording credit to drought sufferers for rehabilitation, and by cooperation with the community, and thus to avoid the opiates of government charity and the stifling of our national spirit of mutual self-help.

Service Rife in Nation.

We can take courage and pride in the effective work of thousands of voluntary organizations for provision of employment, for relief of distress, that have sprung up over the entire Nation. Industry and business have recognized a social obligation to their employes as never before. The State and local governments are being helpful. The people are, themselves, succeeding in this task. Never before in a great depression has there been so systematic a protection against distress; never before has there been so little social disorder; never before has there been such an outpouring of the spirit of self-sacrifice and of service.

The ever-growing complexity of modern life, with its train of ever-more perplexing and difficult problems, is a challenge to our individual characters and to our devotion to our ideals. The resourcefulness of America when challenged has never failed. Success is not gained by leaning upon the Government to solve all the problems before us. That way leads to enervation of will and destruction of character. Victory over this depression and over our other difficulties will be won by the resolution of our people to fight their own battles in their own communities, by stimulating their ingenuity to solve their own problems, by taking new courage to be masters of their own destiny in the struggle of life. This is not the easy way, but it is the American way. And it was Lincoln's way.

The ultimate goal of the American social ideal is equality of opportunity and individual initiative. These are not born of bureaucracy. This ideal is the expression of the spirit of our people. This ideal obtained at the birth of the Republic. It was the ideal of Lincoln. It is the ideal upon which the Nation has risen to unparalleled greatness.

We are going through a period when character and courage are on trial, and where the very faith that is within us is under test. Our people are meeting this test. And they are doing more than the immediate task of the day. They are maintaining the ideals of our American system. By their devotion to these ideals we shall come out of these times stronger in character, in courage, and in faith.

LAWYERS ARE URGED TO AID WORLD COURT

SPEECHES PUT ON RADIO

As a guarantee of world peace, the lawyers of every country in the world were urged to lend their support to the world court by the Hon. Hugh Guthrie, attorney general and minister of justice of Canada, at the annual dinner of the Federal Bar Association at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

Speaking from the side of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, a former justice of the world court, Mr. Guthrie solicited the support of the lawyers "to be the only fair, reasonable and concrete proposition which has been evolved by the mind of man for the peaceful and final settlement of international disputes."

Both Mr. Guthrie and Chief Justice Hughes gave tribute to Abraham Lincoln, the former describing him as "once belonging to the United States, but today he belongs to the world."

Speeches Are Broadcast.

Each of the addresses was heard by lawyers in the Federal service and a distinguished group of guests. The speeches were broadcast by the National Broadcasting Co.

Mr. Guthrie declared that "the world court has passed the experimental stage and has amply justified both the efforts and hopes of its founders. It has become a valuable bulwark for the peace of the world."

The assistance given by Chief Justice Hughes toward the World Court will always stand out preeminently, Mr. Guthrie predicted, even though "this great Nation has not yet yielded its complete adherence to that tribunal."

Speaker Expresses No Opinion.

As to the attitude of the United States toward the World Court, the speaker had to offer, "no opinion, no suggestion, and certainly no criticism. I merely express profound, and I think also, universal regret."

The most important policy of any Nation, Mr. Guthrie asserted, is the maintenance of peace. He granted that it is discouraging to view the increase in military armaments during the past year, in spite of world courts, treaties of limitation, arbitration and renunciation. He asked his listeners to use the law, and the World Court, to hasten the settled peace of the world.

Discussing briefly the League of Nations, he said that if the league "shall succeed in removing from the minds of men the fear of war and the burdens of war from the backs of the multitudes, it will have done the greatest thing for mankind which has been done in this world since Christ was born in Bethlehem."

Hughes Praises Lawyers.

Chief Justice Hughes praised the work of the Federal lawyers for their assistance in handling the cases of the Government.

The Chief Justice closed his address with a tribute to Lincoln. "He was fair and thorough. Whenever he addressed himself to a question, he penetrated to the heart of it; he was analytical and precise. He was instinct with love of humanity, but this did not leave him in a sentimental fog."

The Chief Justice declared that Lincoln "hated chicanery. Strong in contest, he loved the processes of peace. 'Discourage litigation,' he said, 'persuade your neighbors to compromise whenever you can.'"

"Honest, sagacious and conciliatory; astute and humane; eloquent, with simplicity and candor, he embodies the nation's ideal."

Mr. Mitchell, who was toastmaster, was introduced to the gathering by William R. Vallance, president of the association.

TRIBUTE TO LINCOLN IS JOINED BY ORIENT

Japanese Ambassador Pays Warm Tribute to Civil War President.

HOOVER WREATH PLACED

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 12 (A.P.).—The Orient and the Occident joined hands to pay tribute today to a Mid-western country lawyer whose works have been perpetuated by the Nation.

At the Tomb of Abraham Lincoln stood Ambassador Katsuki Debuchi of Japan and Gov. Louis L. Emmerson of Illinois. In a few words they bespoke their admiration for the sixteenth President of the United States.

Then a wreath from the thirtieth President — Herbert Hoover — was placed by the trembling hands of G. A. R. members close to the vault in which Lincoln rests. That was all. Springfield repaired from the lofty tomb to memorial meetings in the shadow of the State capitol.

Facing each other at the entrance to the tomb, Gov. Emmerson and Ambassador Debuchi had united in an exposition of the world-wide aspect of the observance.

"From my boyhood," said Ambassador Debuchi, "Lincoln has been one of my heroes."

Louisville, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Describing Abraham Lincoln as a party man, Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde, in an address at the annual dinner of the Lincoln Protective Club here tonight, made a plea for a tightening of the party harness, which he said, hangs loosely from many shoulders today. Secretary Hyde said that into many minds "politics is a word of reproach. To them party loyalty is a stigma. This sentiment is the incubator of blocs and cliques; the hatchery of bizarre schemes and dangerous catch-penny programs which no responsible party organization would dare to underwrite."

Greensboro, N. C., Feb. 12 (A.P.).—President Hoover was described as "the man who never failed" by Representative Franklin Fort (Republican), New Jersey, in an address here tonight to a Lincoln Day gathering of North Carolina Republicans.

"President Hoover," he said, "is the victim of the same type of yelping attack which tore the heart of Lincoln."

The speaker also warned that cash payment of soldiers' bonus certificates threatened "our return from depression."

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Party insurgents were contrasted with Abraham Lincoln in an address here tonight by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee.

In a tribute to President Hoover, Mr. Lucas said that "like Lincoln, our present President has a stern sense of justice, believes in economy in public and private affairs, has a high devotion to duty, possesses the courage of his convictions, puts personal service above personal advantage, has unsullied personal and public integrity; is modest, patient, temperate, charitable, firm; has a reverent respect for women and womanhood."

Thomson Center Group Shows Lincoln Pictures

The Thomson Community Center observed Lincoln Day with a community program at the center last night. It started Thursday night meetings at which the doors of the auditorium will be opened to parents accompanied by their children. Lantern slides of the life and times of Lincoln were shown under the direction of Mrs. A. J. Driscoll.

Red Trade Menace Is Seen by Senator

Economic Isolation From Communist Machine Is Asked.

Philadelphia, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Urging support for his bill which would prohibit the importation of all Soviet products, United States Senator Tasker L. Oddie, of Nevada, in an address here tonight asserted that the least this country could do was to "establish economic isolation from the Communist machine."

Unless this be done promptly, he said, unemployment and poverty will reach still greater proportions, and "The Communist machine will have developed sufficient strength to make a world war unavoidable."

Senator Oddie was a speaker at the annual Lincoln Day dinner of the Legion of Honor of Lu Lu Temple, a Masonic organization. He said the world today was menaced by a form of organized slavery on a scale far greater than during the war between the States.

Mills' Night Work Data Given Hoover

Employment of Women and Children for Such Jobs to Be Cut Down.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover was informed yesterday that elimination of night work for women and children in cotton mills has become a virtual certainty.

George A. Sloan, head of the Cotton Textile Institute of New York, told the President that operators representing 70 per cent of the mills utilizing such night labor had indorsed the policy and agreed to put it into effect on March 1, provided an additional 5 per cent of the industry came under the scope of the plan.

The institute, Sloan said, "hoped and believed" that the gaining of the additional assent was certain. He added that President Hoover offered sympathetic support for the movement. Secretary Lamont accompanied Sloan to the White House.

NYE BODY MAY CALL CANNON IN FUND QUIZ

Decision Awaits Analysis of Data Provided by Bankers at Probe.

STUDY THREE ACCOUNTS

(Associated Press.

Bishop James Cannon, jr., may be called before the Senate campaign funds committee before its investigation of the churchman's handling of funds in the 1928 anti-Smith campaign is completed.

This was indicated yesterday by Chairman Nye, who said definite decision would await an examination of the mass of data received yesterday from banking officials.

No further hearings are planned until this examination is finished. The investigation started Wednesday, after Representative Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, had charged the bishop with violating the Federal corrupt practices act in handling campaign funds.

Bishop Cannon was chairman of the Virginia anti-Smith committee in the 1928 presidential election. He has been questioned about his activities by the Senate lobby committee, but he successfully challenged its authority for such an inquiry.

The data received Wednesday dealt with deposits and withdrawals from accounts maintained by the Southern Methodist churchman in several Virginia and Washington banks during 1928, as head of the Virginia anti-Smith committee, as executor of an estate and as "James Cannon, jr."

Bishop Cannon has denied the charges filed with the committee by Representative Tinkham, and has received permission from Nye to file a sworn statement later if he deems one necessary to prove "indubitably" that they are unfounded.

Bishop Cannon is still confined to a hospital with arthritis, and it is unlikely his physician would permit him to be questioned by the committee for some time.

Services Today Will Honor Former Medical Director

Portrait of the late Col. Edgar O. Crossman, former medical director of the Veterans' Bureau, which will be unveiled at the Arlington Building this afternoon.

Memorial to Official in Veterans' Unit to Be Unveiled Today.

A portrait of the late Col. Edgar O. Crossman, who served two terms as medical director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, will be unveiled today in the Arlington Building office he used to occupy, with former associates, friends and relatives participating in memorial exercises.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veteran affairs, who was director of the Veterans' Bureau when Col. Crossman was its medical chief, will accept the portrait, the gift of more than 1,000 employes of the bureau throughout the Nation. Dr. B. W. Black, Oakland, Calif., Dr. Crossman's immediate successor, will make the presentation.

Edgar G. Crossman, of New York, son of the honored physician, is to unveil the memorial, which is the latest work of S. Burtis Baker, Washington artist.

Dr. Crossman, who was professor of psychiatry at the University of Vermont and had served in both houses of New Hampshire's Legislature before coming to Washington as medical director of the bureau in 1923, specialized in neuro-psychiatry and devoted his last years especially to aiding nervous and mentally ill World War veterans.

His two terms as medical director were from 1923 to 1926, and from 1928 to June 21, 1929, when he died. Between these two periods he was allowed to work in his native New England as commanding officer of the Veterans Hospital at Bedford, Mass. His nine years in the Veterans' Bureau followed service in the U. S. Army Medical Corps, and he was buried in Arlington Cemetery with full military honors.

Memorial exercises were arranged by the following members of the Edgar O. Crossman memorial committee: Dr. George C. Skinner, chairman; Dr. Roy D. Adams, Dr. Winthrop Adams, Miss Mary Agnes Brown, secretary, and John I. Spreckelmyer, treasurer.

"FLAT FALSEHOOD," IS WILBUR'S REPLY

FORMER AGENT IS SILENT

(Associated Press.)

The charge that pressure from large oil companies influenced him in awarding patent to Colorado oil shale lands was described yesterday by Secretary Wilbur as a "flat falsehood."

That was the Cabinet member's reply, made yesterday before the Senate public lands committee, to charge by Ralph S. Kelley, former field agent of the Interior Department's General Land Office.

Kelley, sitting across a narrow table from the Interior Secretary, listened in silence as Wilbur accused him of having "sold out" to a newspaper "statements he should have made to the department."

"In passing upon oil shale patent application," said Secretary Wilbur, "I can assure you there has been no ulterior motive.

Denies Political Influence.

"My action was not in any single case influenced by any personal, political, financial or other interest or pressure. The decisions of the General Land Office, the department and myself personally have been based on merits as disclosed by the record.

"My office is and always has been open to any man who has business there including Kelley who has never entered it nor asked to. He first saw me, so far as I know, at the House oil shale hearings two weeks ago. Kelley has avoided exercising the right of coming to me.

"The statement that I have been subjected to any pressure or yielded to it is a flat falsehood."

The Secretary assured the committee that "despite Kelley's nonsense the oil and gas reserves of this Nation will continue to be conserved by this department as long as I am Secretary but with regard for all equities and with respect for statutory requirements."

Kelley Later "Disappeared."

Wilbur added that while Kelley was with the land office in Denver he had written to the department letters that were "vague, egotistic and full of charges containing hyperbole" but that the department had made every effort to discover whether any basis existed for his criticisms.

"In order to make sure," the Secretary said, "I had him come to Washington to take charge of the oil shale activities of the land office." He added Kelley "disappeared" after serving in that capacity from last October 5 to October 31.

The next he heard of Kelley, the Secretary said a newspaperman informed him he had resigned and had made numerous charges against the Interior Department.

large sale of bread per store. Its 5-cent bread showed a profit in every city in which the company operates except in Washington, he added.

Figures submitted by Mr. Marshall showed that his company made a profit of .69 cents per loaf on its bread. He submitted a statement of costs which showed that since the price of ingredients, of which labor was listed at 6.19 per cent, declined, the overhead charges and profits per loaf of bread had increased.

Mr. Marshall declared that the decrease in the cost of making bread had been taken up in giving the consumers better quality and increased weight for the same money.

FRANCE INCREASES BUDGET FOR NAVY

1931 Program Shows Jump of $11,000,000 Over Last Year's Total.

ITALIAN ROW HELD CAUSE

Paris, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—France will spend $11,000,000 more on her naval program this year than last, or $123,000,000, as compared with $112,000,000 in 1930, despite efforts by the British foreign office to bring a naval accord between France and Italy.

The 1931 naval program, forecast last week and placed officially before the naval committee of the Chamber of Deputies today, provides for one battle cruiser of 23,333 tons, one 7,000-ton cruiser and two submarines of 2,800 and 2,500 tons, respectively.

This was taken to indicate France will build no warships whatever this year in keeping with her naval policy that smaller ships, especially light cruisers and submarines, are best adapted to her idea of naval defense. The 23,000-ton cruiser is calculated to offset the German cruisers of the Ersatz Preussen type.

Regarding the Franco-Italian naval arguments, which prevented them from participating in the full fruits of the London Naval Conference, an official spokesman said tonight that, despite the increased expenditure, the program was so modest France could not be accused of precipitating a naval race with Italy.

DROUGHT AID GIVEN 255,737 FAMILIES

$2,500,000 necessary to complete the fund.

Their addresses went over the National Broadcasting Co. System, which was paid for its service by the General Foods Corporation.

Judge Payne, from Washington, said the money already received "is now being sent and enables the Red Cross to carry on."

"Two and a half millions more will complete the fund," he added. "This will enable the Red Cross to care for the sufferers until the barren farms come again into production."

Mr. Payne said the work of his organization had been "well done."

Gov. Parnell, speaking from the executive mansion at Little Rock, said his State would not admit permanent defeat, "but we need and must have temporary help, and we must have it speedily."

"Imagine," he said, "what your own plight would be if your income for a year were wiped out, your savings were put beyond your reach and your friends, neighbors and relatives to whom you turned for help were in similar straits. That is the plight of a million people in the drought-stricken States today."

UNIONISTS CENSURE CONTRACTORS' ACTS

"Peddling" of Agreements of "Irresponsible" Parties Strongly Assailed.

FEDERAL WORK INVOLVED

Practices described as the "peddling" of subcontracts on Government buildings by so-called "irresponsible" general contractors were assailed yesterday here by the International Union of Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers.

Both John J. Gleason, secretary of the union, and Thomas Lane, its representative here, attacked the custom as a "vicious" practice in construction programs of the Government which enables the so-called "irresponsible" general contractors to profit at the expense of the Government, the public, the subcontractor and union labor.

Complaining that Government officials had failed to alleviate the conditions pictured last night to them by union leaders, Mr. Gleason called the attention of President Hoover, Secretary of Labor Doak and Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, to the matter in letters sent yesterday.

Spokesmen for the union contend mainly that the general contractors, after receiving a Government contract on the basis of the lowest estimates received from subcontractors, "shop" among the various subcontractors to force them to shade the original estimate received. They claim that this price-cutting practice then forces the subcontractor to find unemployed or nonunion labor willing to work at wages below the prevailing union wages and also to cut down on the quality of materials.

Both Mr. Gleason and Mr. Lane charge that the House is holding up a bill, recently passed by the Senate, requiring that general contractors on Government jobs pay the "prevailing" union wage scale current in any community in which they are working.

The two spokesmen described President Hoover and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon as favorable in substance to their requests.

Committee Favors Bill On Alien Seamen Rights

(Associated Press.)

The Senate commerce committee yesterday approved the La Follette bill to permit seamen on foreign as well as American flag vessels to sue in United States courts to collect wages.

The measure would clarify the seamen's act, of which the late Senator La Follette was the author. A similar bill was passed by the Senate in the last Congress but was not considered by the House.

encouragement of industry by such treatment."

Asked what the Cuban properties of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation were worth here, Mr. Schwab looked thoughtful.

A newspaperman suggested $20,000,000.

"More—much more," Schwab was quick to answer.

"Fifty million?"

"Still low. In fact, my organization would not sell its properties on the north coast of Cuba for any price. There are tremendous quantities of iron there—vast deposits which will last for many years. These millions of tons lying just below Cuba's crust will in future years play a much more important role in the country's development than they do now."

Mr. Schwab came down with a party of friends "just to play golf and enjoy myself." He said that he would remain until about March 1. Mrs. Schwab, who is an invalid, remained in New York.

U. S., FRANCE URGED TO DIVERT WEALTH

MONEY CENTER IS MOVED

Paris, Feb. 12 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Spreading out of the wealth now concentrated in the United States and France by putting it to work on long-term and foreign credits was advocated today as one solution of the world's economic ills in an address before the American Club here by Gates W. McGarrah, president of the Bank for International Settlements.

The International Bank, McGarrah told his listeners, who included many French bankers, has decided to set an example by devoting $25,000,000 to loans running from six months to two years. He expressed the hope that other big banks will follow suit.

Political Stability Needed.

To render such long-term, and foreign loans possible on a large scale, the speaker added, political tranquillity and stability, both national and international, must first be assured.

McGarrah, who has been known for his silence during the months he has directed the building up of the International Bank at Basel, Switzerland, intimated in his first important public statement that London no longer occupies the same position as a financial center that she formerly did, and that the honor is now divided between New York and Paris.

He complimented Clement Moret, governor of the Bank of France, for advocating long term credits in his annual report, recently made to the directors of the bank here.

Stabilized Currency Needed.

A quarter of all the International bank's loans and 95 per cent of all its long-term loans have been to Germany, McGarrah stated. The bank's other loans have been widely scattered, a few of them to Balkan states but none to countries whose currencies have not been stabilized.

The International Bank's greatest service so far, said its president, has been in shifting capital so that interest rates have been maintained at normal and the granting of seasonal loans to European countries to help move crops.

All these operations have been under the direction of the Central Bank of the country with which they were concerned. Solidarity of banking interests has thereby been increased and the International bank has been serving as a clearing house for gold.

TRANSFUSION FAILS TO SAVE CLERGYMAN

Rev. E. R. Palmer, Adventist, Dies, Despite Blood Given by Two Students.

CAME TO TAKOMA IN 1903

Blood given by two Washington Missionary College students failed to save the life of the Rev. E. R. Palmer, general manager of the Review & Herald Publishing Association, who died of double pneumonia yesterday at the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital.

The students who volunteered their blood in the vain hope that his life might be prolonged, were Lawrence Senseman and John Gomez.

The Rev. Mr. Palmer has lived in Takoma since 1903, coming there as secretary of the general conference publishing department of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. In that year the headquarters of the denomination were transferred from Battle Creek, Mich., to this city. About eighteen years ago Mr. Palmer became general manager of the publishing association.

He was born at West Charleston, Vt., March 22, 1869. From 1887 until 1892 he attended the Adventists' School at South Lancaster, Mass.

He was secretary of the publishing department in Vermont from 1892 to 1895. In 1894 he made his first connection with the general conference of the denomination, and spent several months as instructor in Christian salesmanship. He went to Australia in 1895 as director of publishing work of the church there, afterward serving for two years as president of the Seventh Day Adventist School at Avondale, Australia.

Surviving him are his wife and four children, Miss Pansy E. Palmer, Clarence E. Palmer and Delmar M. Palmer, of this city, and Mrs. Alice L. Walton, of Union Springs, N. Y. Funeral services will be held in the Takoma Park Seventh Day Adventist Church at 3 o'clock, Saturday. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mystic Ritual Conducted At Rosicrucian's Funeral

Director of Order's Northeastern Division Honored in Death Following Fatal Accident When Hit by Automobile; Deputy Master Presides.

Funeral services, conducted according to the ritual of the order of the Rosicrucians, were held yesterday morning for Reinhold A. Berrenberg, 55 years old, director of the northeastern division of the order, who died Monday night in Emergency Hospital from injuries received when he was struck and knocked down by an automobile at Dupont Circle. The ceremonies were conducted at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest.

Members of the religious order who officiated at the services included Deputy Master F. A. Goerger of the Church of the Mystic Rose, 1734 K street northwest; Mother Stoa, High Priestess Rosa and Vestals Gloria, Moria, Choral and Eloha.

The ceremonies opened with the soft organ strains of "Going Home." As the music died away the six women, draped in veils of different hues, each color having a secret significance, slowly filed into the funeral parlor, followed by Dr. Goerger wearing the bright red gown of master. The procession halted before the rose-covered casket bearing the body of Dr. Berrenberg.

Mother Stoa, in deep purple draperies, stepped to the head of the casket and delivered a eulogy of the departed "Master Taro." Immediately following this, two of the vestals, bearing water and incense, approached the casket, sprinkling water over the body and burning incense above it, symbolizing purification.

A recitation of the meaning of the "Mystic Rose," was conducted by the vestals, and a solo, "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," was sung by an unseen vocalist. Deputy Master Goerger continued the ceremonies which concluded with a chant, and the placing of a rose on the body by each of those attending the services.

Members of Dr. Berrenberg's family who were present included his wife, Mrs. Louise Berrenberg and their only son, Jack, a student at Randolph Macon Military Academy.

Following the services the body was cremated at Fort Lincoln Cemetery and private interment followed.

ARCHBISHOP IS HOST AT CAPITAL DINNER

MANY NOTABLES ATTEND

Pope's Voice Is Heard On Ship by Dr. Walsh

En route to Rome on his annual trip to the Vatican, where he will personally present to the Pope his report as head of Catholic Near Eastern Relief activities in the United States, Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, regent of the Georgetown Foreign Service School, was an interested listener in on the Pope's world-wide broadcast yesterday morning.

Making an unheralded journey to the Holy City, Dr. Walsh radioed the N. B. C. that he heard the voice of the Supreme Pontiff while aboard the S. S. Bremen, about 1,500 miles off the English coast when the address was tuned in.

The length of Dr. Walsh's stay in Europe could not be learned at the university here.

Climaxing a delegation marking the ninth anniversary of the coronation of Pope Pius XI, Archbishop Pietro Fumasoni-Biondi, Apostolic delegate to the United States, last night entertained a notable assembly of Catholics at dinner at his residence on Biltmore street northwest.

Heading the distinguished churchmen were Cardinal Dennis Dougherty, of Philadelphia; Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore; the Right Rev. James H. Ryan, rector of Catholic University; the Very Rev. Paul Marella, of the Apostolic delegation, and the Very Rev. John F. Fenlon, president of St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, and provincial of the Sulpicians in the United States. Others included the Rev. Celestine Daly and the Rev. Francis E. Hyland, of the Apostolic delegation; the Rev. John J. Burke, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, and the Rev. Dr. Furey, secretary to Cardinal Dougherty.

The laymen included Ambassador Nobile Giacomo de Martino, of Italy; Associate Supreme Court Justice Pierce Butler, Senator Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona; Senator Felix Hebert, of Rhode Island; Sir John Broderick, of the British Embassy, and Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, of New York.

High Mass Conducted.

The principal public event of the celebration was the high mass conducted by Archbishop Fumasoni-Biondi at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception here at Catholic University. He was assisted by Monsignor Patrick McCormick, president of the Sisters' College at the university, and Monsignor Bernard A. McKenna, of the National Shrine. The Rev. Wolfgang Frey, of Latrobe, Pa., was master of ceremonies, and Dr. Fenlon delivered the sermon.

The mass was sung before a distinguished assembly of churchmen and laymen immediately after the voice of Pope Pius, speaking from Rome in his first radio talk to open the new Vatican station, was heard at the shrine through facilities arranged by the National Broadcasting Co. Loud speakers carried the voice of the Catholicism's head to more than 800 persons gathered in the shrine.

Dr. Fenlon, in his sermon, eulogized the Pope "by his tactful, quiet and conciliatory spirit in dealing with the governments of the world" as "truly the father of Christendom."

"His first encyclical on the peace of Christ in the kingdom of Christ showed how deeply he had studied the modern world and its problems, how accurately he had diagnosed its diseases and how clearly he perceived the needed remedies," Dr. Fenlon continued. "In that encyclical he unfolded the program which during the past nine years he has followed so steadfastly to the enormous benefit of the church and the world. In his zeal for the missions he has shown himself a successor to the apostles. By his immense charity to the needy and the suffering he has proved to be the father of the poor. His encyclicals are worthy to take their place in that great series of utterances from the holy see, which in modern times have given such clear guidance to the Catholic world and shed so much glory on the papacy."

Pius Is Eulogized.

"Our holy father's simplicity, his transparent honesty, his humility and kindliness have won the hearts of the Catholic world, while his courage and independence, his wisdom and tireless energy will rank him among the great popes of modern times. To this man has fallen the duty of guiding the church after the most colossal disaster to the world in its history.

"The modern world views with wonder the vigor of the papacy; never was the authority of the Pope less questioned than by his flock of today. Never was devotion to the person of the holy father deeper in the Catholic heart; never was there in general a more prompt and glad obedience to the directions of the holy father."

Man Quickly Acquitted On Rum-Driving Charge

Lewis J. Huested, for six years a member of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, was acquitted in record time yesterday by a Police Court jury on a charge of driving while drunk. Judge Isaac R. Hitt presided. The jury was out less than five minutes.

Through Attorney John P. Mullen the defendant proved he had taken only one drink on the date of his arrest, January 30. In addition the defendant brought out testimony indicating he had been manhandled by one of the arresting policemen.

Theft of $20 Revolver Reported.

Maj. William H. Hobson, U. S. A., of 1569 Forty-fourth street northwest, yesterday told police that a revolver which he valued at $20 was stolen from his home at that address. He said the revolver, Army service type, was taken from the house Wednesday.

"THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP"

CATHOLIC OFFICIALS HEAR POPE'S ADDRESS

Harris & Ewing.

High officials of the Catholic Church were present in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University yesterday to hear the broad cast of the first radio address of Pope Pius XI from the Vatican City. Left to right—Mgr. Patrick McCormick, Most Rev. Pietro Fumasoni-Biondi, apostolic delegate, and Mgr. Bernard A. McKenna, of the Shrine of Immaculate Conception.

TEXT OF POPE'S RADIO TALKS

"To all creation:

"We, being through the high design of God, successors of the Prince of the Apostles of Him that in whose doctrine and preaching is destined through divine command for all peoples and for every creature, and being able for the first time to avail ourselves of Marconi's admirable invention here, we speak first to all things and to all men, speaking to them here and as follows with the words themselves of Holy Scripture:

"'Hear, oh heavens, that which I shall say, and listen, oh earth, to the words of my mouth.

"'Listen all people, lend your ear all you who inhabit the globe, united toward the same end. Both the rich and the poor. Hear, oh, islands, and listen oh, distant peoples.'

"To God—and let this be our first word, glory to God on high and peace on earth to men of good will.

"Glory to God who gives in our days such power to men of making their words arrive even to the confines of the earth; and peace on earth where we are representatives of that divine Jesus, the Redeemer, whose coming announced peace, peace to the far and peace to the near, pacifying in the blood of the cross both the things that are on earth as well as those in the skies.

Exhortation to Catholics.

"To Catholics—In speaking, then, to men, the apostle commands us to do good to all, but especially to the servants of the faith. We must therefore address our first words to them, to all those who, making part of the family and fold of the Lord which is the Catholic Church, call us with the sweet name of father. To fathers and to sons we speak, to the sheep and to the lambs, to all those whom the shepherd and supreme king Jesus Christ has confided to us in order to nourish them and guide them.

"To the hierarchy—You, we say, our brethren, cardinals of the Holy Roman Church, patriarchs, archbishops, bishops, prelates and priests, distributed in the different grades of the hierarchy, the principal object of our daily talks and at the same time the auxiliaries and partakers of our labors. We pray and beg that each of you remain faithful to that vocation in which he was called, and that each one of you walk worthily of the vocation to which you have been called.

"Nourish the flock of God which is amongst you, forming with all your heart your flock so that when the Prince of Shepherds appears you will receive the incorruptible crown of glory.

Meanwhile the God of peace who had resurrected from death the great pastor of the sheep in the blood of eternal testament, our Lord Jesus Christ, guides you toward every good so that you may fulfill His will, accomplishing in yourselves that which will be pleasing in His sight by means of Jesus Christ.

Urges Faith With Church.

"To the religious—and now we speak to you, oh, sons and daughters of our predelection who, emulating the best examples and seconding not only the precepts, but also the desires and counsels of the Divine King and his spouse, in fidelity to your most holy vows and in the religious disciples of all your life, perfume with virgin fragrance the Church of God, illuminate it with your contemplations, uphold it with prayers, enrich it with science and doctrine, cultivate and enlarge ever so much more with your ministry of the word and with the works of the apostolate.

"Partakers, therefore, in one vocation truly heavenly and angelic, so much more precious is the treasure that you bring as the greater degree of diligence you use in conserving it, not only to render certain your vocation and election, but also because the heart of the King and of your spouse might find in you, as in servants completely faithful and devoted, some consolation and reparation for the infinite offenses and negligences with which men return His ineffable love.

"To missionaries—Now our words turn toward you, oh, sons and daughters very dear in Christ, who in the missions pray and work to propagate the holy faith of Jesus Christ and to extend His kingdom. Like the first apostles of the church you also, in perils, necessities and tribulations, create with great patience an example for all.

Helpers Are Praised.

"Like them you also are the 'glory of God,' you who in labors, often in chains and in blood, fighting even unto death the good and great battle of faith and of suffering, and confessing generously your faith, gain your souls and sow the seed of future Christians.

"We salute you, oh strong soldiers of Christ. But together with you we salute the native priests and good catechists, principal fruits and now colleagues and helpers of your labors.

"To all faithful—our heart turns toward you, to all who are faithful citizens of our episcopal city and of all the world; toward you especially who, like the first believers, the men and women of whom the apostle makes high praise, even though belonging to the laity, in the apostolate collaborate with us and with our venerable brothers, the bishops, and with the priests, to you, oh people of God and sheep of His pasture, you elect of the race, regal priesthood, holy nation, people gained by God.

"Yet your modesty, so well known to all men, and all that which is true, all that which is pure, all that which is just, all that which is saintly, all that which is lovable and of good fame, every virtue and every laudable discipline, form the object of your thoughts and be your works so that God may be glorified in everything and in every one.

"To infidels and dissidents—also to you our thoughts and our words turn as many of you are far from faith and from the unity of Christ. For you every day we offer prayers to God and the Lord of all, earnestly asking that He with His light illuminate you and guide you and unite you to the sheep which hear His voice, and that there be only one fold and one shepherd.

Urges Justice, Charity.

"To governors—and since we are debtors to all, we speak first to those who govern that they command in justice and in charity, toward utility and edification, and not toward ruin, always remembering that there is no power if not from God, and that to God they must render rigorous count.

"To subjects—To subjects, then, we say that they should obey their superiors, not as toward men, but as toward God, knowing that he who resists legitimate authority resists the dispositions of God, and that he who in this way resists prepares damnation for himself.

"To the rich—We speak to rich and to poor in this way. To the rich we say that they must consider themselves as ministers of Divine Providence and depositaries and dispensers of their goods, to whom Jesus Christ Himself recommended the poor, and from whom the Divine Judge, then, will demand more because they have received more; and they must remember always the Divine Word, 'Woe unto you, oh rich.'

"To the poor—We exhort, then, in the Lord, the poor, who recall to us the poverty of Jesus Christ our Lord and Saviour. Remembering His examples and His promises, they should not abandon the gathering of spiritual riches, rendered so much more easily to them, and though attempting insofar as is legal to better their state, with good and upright heart let them make themselves agreeable to the Lord, and let them never extend their hands toward iniquity.

Begs Industrial Peace.

"To workmen and employers—We earnestly beg of workmen and of employers that, avoiding every hostile contest and mutual strife, they join in fraternal and friendly alliance. They exchange on one hand the means and direction, and on the other hand the work and ability, and, not asking except what is just and not denying what is just, let them strive in tranquillity and order, not so much for the benefit of the one, but for the good of all.

"To the afflicted and persecuted—last in execution, but first in our attention and in our affections, our word goes out to you, to all of you who are in infirmity and in sorrow, in tribulation and adversity, especially to you who suffer such terrible things from the enemies of God and of human society.

"While we offer for you our prayers and as much as we can, also our assistance, while we recommend you to the charity of all, we speak to you on the part of Christ whom we represent: 'Come to me all you who are weary and afflicted and I will restore you.'

"There remains only the imparting, with all our hearts, of the apostolic benediction to the city and to the world, and to all those who live in it, which we do in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost."

Address to Scientists.

Rome, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—The text of the Pope's address at the Pontifical Academy of Science, translated from Italian into English, follows:

"We say most willingly that our acceptance of the radio station is most dear to us, but still more dear is the gift and the sentiment of Senator Marconi.

"We offer thanks to God and to man for this great new invention. Thanks to God for his manifestations, so genuine and so accurate of His divine goodness; we give thanks to God for this great invention which brings us so close to Him.

"A few days ago we inaugurated the power station, perhaps one of the most modern of its kind in Italy and one of the most perfect in existence.

"Today we have attained the apex of modern invention in the new radio apparatus—the last word in technicality and science.

"Senator Marconi had promised us one of the most modern of inventions. This promise he has fulfilled so magnificently that he may ask what yet remains to constitute the latest development in radio.

"No one will think that we are far from the primate of Peter in adopting this new invention. Let it be known that we have adopted it in the true sense of Peter propagating the Church.

Serves the Glory of God.

"It is a privilege to accept this great invention which we shall use as an instrument to spread the faith and the Church.

"The radio is the offspring of ultra modern science. It serves the glory of God and the efficacy of spreading salvation into all souls.

"In this great privilege we shall rejoice continually. The realization of this dream is a recompense for the work that was needed to build this station.

"We have heard expressed the sentiments of Senator Marconi and of Father Gianfranceschi in dedication of the new Pontifical Academy of Science.

"Finally we give thanks again to God, but not only to God but to men as well. We thank you, Senator Marconi, and all those who have cooperated with you so intelligently, faithfully and devotedly in making possible this great work.

"To make our expressions of gratitude more real we now give the apostolic blessing to all of these."

Policeman Asks $75,000 For Hurts in Accident

Claiming to have suffered permanent injuries in an accident, Avon Shockey, 37-year-old motorcycle policeman, filed suit yesterday in District Supreme Court seeking to recover $75,000 damages from the Southern Building Supply Co., of 6000 Blair road northwest.

Avon, through Attorney Robert E. Lynch, tells the court he has been crippled for life as a result of collision between his motorcycle and one of the defendant's trucks last July 11 on Colorado avenue northwest near Nicholson street. He suffered a crushed knee and a fractured leg, he states.

POPE PIUS DELIVERS INITIAL RADIO TALKS

Pontiff Formally Dedicates Vatican City Station; Millions Listen.

MARCONI IS DECORATED

rapidly than he usually speaks Italian, French or German to visiting pilgrimages. Once or twice he glanced questioningly at Marconi as if he were a little surprised to find himself speaking into an unresponsive instrument a message which ordinarily he would deliver to a group of hundreds of thousands of applauding pilgrims.

When he finished he turned to Senator Marconi and Father Gianfranceschi and spoke a few words of compliment when they assured him the instruments had functioned perfectly and that his speech now was ringing in the ears of millions of people.

Stiff Formality Lacking.

Five cardinals, including the papal secretary of state, Pacelli, and Cardinal Gasparri, who were negotiators of the Lateran treaty, as the result of which the station was erected, greeted him upon his arrival and stood nearby while he spoke. There was a singular lack of the usual stiff formality of the Pope's appearances.

All the color of the pontiff's progresses, however, was there in plenty, from a company of papal gendarmes drawn up outside the station to six trumpeters in doublet and hose who signalled on silver instruments the Pope's arrival in a red automobile.

In both of his addresses the Pope referred with gratitude to the invention of the radio, which he said could be used to follow the precepts of St. Peter in "propagating the church." The invention, he said, "serves the glory of God," and added that he meant to use it for that purpose.

Despite fears that atmospheric conditions might interfere with the broadcast, officials of the Vatican station said this evening everything had functioned perfectly and nothing had occurred to mar the success of the broadcast.

Radio Systems of U. S. Transmit Voice Clearly

New York, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—The delicate machinery of America's two great broadcasting systems gathered in the voice of Pope Pius XI today as it came over the Atlantic and disseminated it—clear, firm and strong—throughout the Nation.

It was an exceptional transatlantic transmission, unmarred by static or by fading, the twin troubles which have made hash of many overseas radio attempts.

Only one bit of interference was encountered. When the Pope first went on the air at the dedication ceremonies of the new Vatican City radio station HVJ, he talked against a background of high-pitched whistling.

Interference Held Accidental.

Radio engineers, who call this type of trouble a heterodyne, explained it was caused by overlapping wave lengths. Although the difficulty developed soon after the Pope started to talk and ceased when he had completed his message to the world, officials of both the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System said they were certain the interference was accidental.

The broadcast, notable to secular radio officials because it was a Pope's first radio appearance, was of special significance to Catholics, to whom the pontiff is the vicar of Christ on earth.

In the street in front of one of the churches in New York's "Little Italy" more than 2,000 of the faithful assembled to hear the words from Vatican City. As the Pope began his address, these listeners made the sign of the cross and went on their knees. They knelt on the pavement until the conclusion of the message. Many were women, with babies in their arms.

Capital Dignitaries Gather.

While these lowly Catholics were giving expression to their faith in a cold New York street high dignitaries of the church, assembled in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, also listened to the words of their spiritual leader. Diplomats from Catholic nations, including Giacomo de Martino, Italian Ambassador, were present at that ceremony, which concluded with solemn high mass.

At the office of M. H. Aylesworth, president of the NBC, five priests, men so much at home in Latin that they write it in shorthand, tried to catch the Pope's words but failed. He spoke with such rapidity they could not keep up with him.

Organization of Minneapolis Stops Here for Only One Performance.

CONDUCTOR IS PRAISED

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra on tour of the country made its only appearance in Washington yesterday in concert at the National Theater and left behind them a most pleasant impression of sound musicianship and achievement.

Henri Verbrugghen, conductor of the symphony, led his men through the mazes of the Tschaikowsky "Symphony No. 5 in E Minor," producing artistic effects and a beautiful ensemble tone in his reading of the score.

The prelude and fugue in "C Sharp Minor," written by Bach and rearranged by Mr. Verbrugghen, served to show other facets of the orchestra's ability and was one of the outstanding numbers of the afternoon.

Other numbers on the program were Ravel's Bolero and two dances from the ballet, "The Convent by the Water," by Casella, and the closing number was the sprightly "Hungarian March," from "The Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz.

Cause of Death Sought.

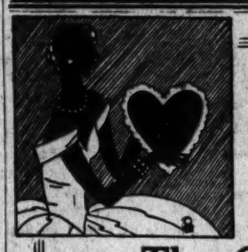

Havana, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—An autopsy was to be held today in an effort to solve the death of Charles E. Gell, of San Francisco, whose bruised and lacerated body was found floating in the gulf off Vevada, a Havana suburb, yesterday. He came here January 25 and was registered at a hotel.

THE BONUS PROPOSAL.

Just as business conditions have taken a favorable turn and the people are recovering confidence, the House committee on ways and means votes to report out a bill granting veterans' loans up to 50 per cent of the face value of compensation certificates, at 4½ per cent interest compounded annually.

If this bill should become law the Treasury would face a liability of $1,450,000,000, without any provision having been made for equivalent revenue. An immediate and enormous deficit would confront the Government, and it would be necessary to increase taxes. A bond issue might be proposed to finance the bonus, but it is possible that a violent reaction may occur if the country becomes convinced that Congress is bent upon creating this staggering debt. A bond issue might be unsalable in such conditions except upon such costly terms as to compel a still further increase of taxes to wipe out the crushing charges.

Against the solemn warnings of the Treasury Department and Gen. Hines, head of the Veterans' Administration, the House committee seems to have made a political decision calculated to wreck the national finances and utterly discourage the business community. There are suspicious signs of a political combination in the action of the ways and means committee. The temptation in Congress to cater to the "soldier vote" is very strong, among Republicans and Democrats, but in addition to this motive it is apparent that Democrats are preparing to support this bonus proposal in the hope that they can embarrass the administration. President Hoover is compelled, of course, to conserve the Federal finances. He can not be expected to join in a move to appease the veterans at the cost of an enormous deficit and a heavy increase of taxation. He should not be faced with such a proposal. It is incumbent upon Congress as well as upon the President to conserve the finances in such manner as to avoid an increase of taxes.

The bonus bill now threatens to involve Congress in a controversy that may bring about an extra session. Republicans in the House and Senate can not afford to incur the responsibility of an extra session for the sake of granting excessively liberal advances to the veterans. The resulting deficit and the inevitable increase of taxation would bring down a heavy penalty upon the party responsible for the blunder.

The Democratic party, having no responsibility for the conduct of the Government, may be expected to support the bonus proposal, in the hope that the Republicans in Congress will make the fatal mistake of passing the legislation. The Democrats would need no better issue in 1932 than a demoralized Treasury and an increase of taxation chargeable to the Republican administration and Republican Congress.

The duty of the Republican majority in Congress is plain. However ardently Republicans may wish to relieve veterans by generous advances upon certificates, they should not make these advances so extravagant as to create a deficit and an increase of taxes. They owe a duty to the administration, including the Treasury, and to the taxpayers. They can avoid incurring this enormous liability of $1,450,000,000 at this time. They have no right to incur it. The shock to business, industry, finance, transportation and all other activities in which citizens, including veterans, make their living will be so great if this liability is incurred that continued depression, unemployment and public distress will surely follow, including distress to veterans themselves.

Moral courage to resist this proposed plunge into debt and taxation is a necessity now on the part of the Republicans in Congress.

PRICE OF BREAD.

Ethelbert Stewart, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, has told of the Senate food price investigating committee that bread has not kept pace with other commodities in the price declines of recent months. Despite the fact that virtually every ingredient of bread with the exception of condensed milk is selling at considerably reduced prices, Mr. Stewart stated that bread prices in 51 cities are relatively higher than the average prices of all other commodities. The wholesale price of flour, he added, has followed the price of wheat very closely and the retail price of flour has followed fairly closely.

In investigating the price of bread the important facts to be considered are the various costs that go into the making of a loaf of bread and their relation one to another. For years the bakers have contended that the principal cost of bread-making is labor and distribution. Senator Copeland recently remarked that it requires a drop of 62 cents in the price of a bushel of wheat to justify a reduction of 1 cent in the price of a loaf of bread. The millers, in their testimony before the investigating committee, brought out the fact that the price of flour has dropped from 33 to 40 per cent in the last eighteen months. If, as the bakers contend, the price of flour is but a minor factor in the price of a loaf of bread, even a drop of 33 per cent in flour might not be great enough to justify materially reduced bread prices.

On the surface it would appear that something must be wrong with commercial bakeries if so large a part of their costs is represented by factors other than basic raw materials. No matter what may be the ultimate finding of the committee in this connection, however, the hearings indicate a way in which housewives can reduce bread costs. With flour selling at one-third less than it did eighteen months ago, perhaps the time is propitious for a revival of home bread-making.

A SELF-OPERATING PLANE.

For years aeronauts have been searching for a "foolproof" plane that could be handled by the average man as easily as an automobile and which would require no more attention in flight than the automobile requires from its driver while it is in motion. Possibly the ship demonstrated recently by A. A. Merrill, collaborator of Langley and Chanute, is such a plane. Conventional in appearance except for the absence of a horizontal stabilizer, the Merrill plane lands and takes off without attention from the pilot, and once in the air it virtually flies itself. The secret of its safety lies in the fact that its wings, instead of being rigidly affixed to the fuselage, are arranged so that they can be tilted to a maximum angle of 14 degrees, thus bracing the plane against the air much as a bird braces itself with its wings.

In at least two respects the Merrill ship seems to mark an advance over conventional design. For beginners and amateurs the advantages of a self-flying and self-landing plane are obvious. In commercial aviation the Merrill plane should be able to surmount the difficulties of landing in fog or darkness. Once the pilot had found the landing field he could set the wings of his ship to the landing angle and allow it to drift down safely without further attention. The Merrill plane has yet other features that will commend it to those interested in safety of the air. It can not be put into a spin. It can not nose over. It will neither stall nor dive and it can not be looped. A plane that can not be stunted will not be popular with daredevil pilots, but it is exactly what the average man has been awaiting before he trusts himself to the air.

Some day America undoubtedly will take to flying. That it has not done so yet is due largely to the fact that the conventional airplane requires constant, skilled attention to take it off, to land it and to keep it safely aloft. If the Merrill plane requires no more attention from the pilot than does an automobile from its operator it may be the forerunner of the American family airplane.

RESTORATION OF SILVER.

The Senate subcommittee which has been investigating commercial relations of the United States with China brought in two distinctly separate recommendations. The first requests the President to call an international conference for the purpose of working out a policy on the uses and status of silver as money. The second asks the President to negotiate with China and other governments with a view to lending that country silver for its rehabilitation.

The close relationship between the two is obvious when it is realized that the sudden diminution of trade between the United States and China is due in large part to the decline in silver prices. Silver is the only form of money that can be successfully used in China under present conditions. Since the value of this metal has been cut in half during the last year, the purchasing power of China has been correspondingly reduced. The stabilization of silver is just as necessary to the restoration of China as is the proposed loan.

The cause of the demoralized silver market is clearly beyond the control of the United States. The subcommittee found that there has been no overproduction of silver in recent years, but that the price decline is a result of dumping upon the market silver formerly used as money. Great Britain, France and Belgium are blamed for debasement of silver coin, and India for melting large quantities of silver money into bullion. It will be extremely difficult, if not impossible, the committee decided, to restore silver to its normal price or to restrain further depressions unless and until the government of India suspends its silver policies and practices. This whole question seems to turn on what the British intend to do with silver in India.

On the other hand, the question of a silver loan for China will no doubt hinge upon the attitude of the United States. It is suggested that part of the 495,874,458 silver dollars now in the Treasury be lent to China for reminting into Chinese coin. These dollars are at present held for redemption of silver certificates, but the committee found that "few, if any," of these certificates are ever redeemed, and these coins are therefore a frozen asset, unused and bearing no interest.

Trade throughout the world has been impaired by the demoralization of silver. In the United States the purchasing power of the silver dollar has been artificially maintained, but that is not the case in China, Mexico, Central and South America, India and the rest of Asia. These countries use silver because they have little or no gold. When their money depreciates by half it is impossible for them to maintain normal trade relations.

The question to be decided from the business standpoint, is whether these vast markets are worth the cost of stabilising silver; for the prospects are that silver will continue to be their medium of exchange. The committee has decided unanimously that these markets are worth the effort.

Switzerland has comparatively little unemployment. But look at the number of people who are kept busy punching the holes in the cheese.

AMERICA'S ARMY SYSTEM

By Hon. PATRICK J. HURLEY, Secretary of War,
In the Nation's Capital Magazine.

Our military system is designed to work in the following manner: If we are confronted by a major emergency the National Guard and regular Army will combine into a single fighting force ready for instant action. Thanks to our geographic isolation, they would be strong enough to hold off any attack for a considerable period of time. Meanwhile, behind their shelter a vast national army could be built up from the skeletonized reserve forces. Because of the work which has already been done in organizing this component and in training its officers and men, it would be possible to put it in the field in a much shorter time than in 1917-1918. The trained mass that eventually would be mobilized could withstand the shock of invasion.

Notice how this plan fits in with the American spirit and American institutions. We are relying, as always, on the American citizen's determination to defend his country, his rights and his property. As always, the Nation's dependence is on the citizen soldier. The mass of our military strength, which would be essential to an effective blow is skeletonized. It would be literally impossible for us to embark on a career of armed aggression without giving preliminary evidence to all mankind. The Army of the United States can defend our country at the drop of a hat; it can only take the offensive after intensive preparation. This military system is voluntary. We have no compulsory service in time of peace.

In erecting this structure for national defense the Government has been concerned with more than man power. The World War taught us that soldiers are helpless unless supported by great quantities of modern weapons and all kinds of special supplies. Even after we had trained millions of soldiers they were forced to go into action with weapons and equipment furnished by the allies. To be forced to enter any future struggle on this basis would be suicidal. Accordingly, Congress, 1920, charged the Assistant Secretary of War with responsibility for providing for the mobilization of material and industrial organizations to meet the country's needs in the event of war. Under this authorization the War Department has proceeded energetically toward working out a comprehensive supply program for use in any future emergency.

The process involved is quite simple in its basic elements. The Army makes estimates of what supplies it will need in time of war. The supply services of the Army, working under a program developed by the Assistant Secretary of War, take these estimates, whether they be for shoes or shells or cannon, and get in touch with suitable production agencies throughout the country. By careful planning it is possible to allocate to individual industrial establishments definite amounts of supplies which they undertake to furnish if need arises. Actually the task is exceedingly complicated.

The program contemplates making full use of the tremendous industrial assets of the country, and distributing the burdens entailed by war equitably upon all elements of our citizenship. The capacities of industries are subject to quick changes. The availability of raw materials not produced in this country enters into the task. One of our great problems is to insure the best use of essential materials in which there may be a shortage. But in spite of these obstacles steady progress has been realized. Great credit for this is due not only to the personnel of the Assistant Secretary of War's office, but also to the patriotic business men of America who have devoted their time and energy freely to this important aspect of our national defense.

One feature of this, our first comprehensive scheme of national defense, is that it is not expensive. When we consider the enormous tangible and intangible treasures that we must guard it is the cheapest insurance premium in the world.

We must have a program for national defense in time of peace. That is an outstanding lesson of our history. We are extremely fortunate that we can obtain security at moderate cost. Our degree of preparedness should never be permitted to assume such proportions as to become a menace to the peace and happiness of any other nation. Our Nation has no imperialistic designs. Our people desire to live on terms of peace and amity with all mankind. As I said in the beginning, our preparedness is to prevent war, not to cause war.

RESULT.

We live our little lives with countless frettings,
Always our blunders leave us vain regrettings,
Always with careless step the toy is broken,
We hold the tongue to find we should have spoken.
We speak in haste when silence had been better,
We wish we had or had not burned the letter,
Nothing is clear—some morrow tells the story!
Our least of deeds may be our greatest glory!

We think this good or bad but are not certain
Upon the future none can lift the curtain.
There is upon this earth no sage adviser
Who will not leave us wishing he'd been wiser.
No man can tell precisely what's the right thing;
Joy and despair may hinge upon a slight thing.
Here lies a task! we do it or we shun it
And later wish we had or had not done it.

Turn right or left; go one way or another
Too late 'twill be to wish we'd gone the other.
What lies an hour away we'll not discover
Until we've marched these sixty minutes over.
There is no safety and no sure way ever,
Word in advance tomorrow sends us never.
We can but do our best when problems try us
And trust in God and time will justify us.

The Sooner You Quit Believing in Santa Claus, the Sooner You Learn to Solve Your Own Problems.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

EVERY individual who has wit enough to be interested in the affairs of his country now has an opportunity to learn something that will be worth while in years to come.

It concerns the ancient law of supply and demand and the ever-popular panacea for economic ills called "price fixing."

Year after year and generation after generation, people work hard to produce something that doesn't sell as they think it should. Failure to get rich makes them resentful and suspicious. And because they don't understand economic laws and have great faith in the laws made by men, they are easily tricked by the visionary who suggest price fixing as a cure for their troubles.

"Let the Government fix the selling price of our product instead of leaving it to chance," they say, "and then we'll always know where we stand. Nobody will be hurt, for the price will be fair, and we can work without anxiety, certain of a fair reward."

It is a beautiful dream, but it never can be more than that.

The only successful price fixing ever known is that in the diamond business, and it is possible only because one concern controls production and is virtually free of competition.

It can't work in any other field for the simple reason that a fixed price, which removes the element of chance and guarantees a profit, encourages the production of more than the world will consume and thus throws on the market a surplus that is offered at any price it will bring.

The financial power of England couldn't fix the price of rubber. The effort served only to raise the price for a time and thus encourage the planting of vast new rubber plantations.

Brazil is fast bankrupting itself in an effort to fix the price of coffee—borrowing millions to hold off the market vast stores that increase yearly and must some day be sold. Lacking a miracle, the day of reckoning will bring ruin.

The United States Government, eager to pacify ruined farmers, has disregarded both economic law and the experience of other nations and made an effort to fix the price of wheat.

It has bought some 100 million bushels, but the great holding still remains a part of the visible supply and so affects the market still.

France, for the first time in her life, has grown enough wheat for herself; Italy has grown more than ever before; the Argentine has doubled her average crop; Russia is exporting millions of bushels. The world is glutted with wheat.

And with other nations willing to sell at any price they can get, which is called the "world price," not all the power of the United States Government can keep the price above its natural level.

You can't get rich raising hogs when nobody wants pork.

PRO AND CON

Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great Show, "Politics," Staged in Congress.

Raskob, Lord Bountiful.

New York Times.

After the criticism to which he has been subjected for underwriting so large a proportion of the expenses of the Democratic National Committee, Chairman Raskob's call for a meeting at Washington March 5 is hailed as an act of unprecedented intrepidity. But invidious remarks about his liberality have not come from politicians. Democratic office-holders and officeseekers are for the most part willing to let Mr. Raskob continue to look out for the bills and furnish an organization to help them in their campaigns.

When 1932 arrives, and a Democratic Presidential candidate is selected, the nominee will follow the custom and choose his own chairman. Probably it will not be Mr. Raskob. For the present, nearly every one in the party is content to permit him to keep on playing the role of Lord Bountiful. Who else would do it?

No Extra Session!

Detroit News.

There is the outspoken Borah who holds an extra session of the new Congress desirable. There are perhaps a half dozen senators who, for their own political purposes, advance fantastic reasons for assembling soon after March 4 a Congress so evenly divided nominally between the two major political parties, and so much confused otherwise by divisions into factions, that it might take all summer to effect a working organization in either house or in both.

Such are the powers of individual senators during the closing days of short sessions that the handful can defeat essential appropriations and force President Hoover to call a special session. Will they do it?

Not a Peace Conference.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Chairman Raskob has summoned his national committee to meet at Washington on March 5. He knows that it will not be a peace conference or a love feast. No man is better aware of the extent of the revolt that has broken out in the Democratic ranks against his authority. And aside from this personal controversy, there is the serious division among the Democrats on the prohibition issue.

But Mr. Raskob, rashly perhaps, has resolved to have a showdown. Long-range planning proved a winning policy in the 1930 campaign. And 1932 is not so far away. Then there is that not unimportant matter of obtaining the sinews of war.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

"Federalist" Amazed by Mr. Wickersham's Readiness to Tackle World Problem After His Futile Handling of Wet and Dry Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Charging that the United States is an example of a lagging Nation, George W. Wickersham, chairman of the President's Law Enforcement Commission, declared, at the annual dinner of George Washington University Law School the other night, that this country should join the world court as part of one of the most effective movements in all history for the advancement of world peace.

Following so soon after the law enforcement commission's futile report on the prohibition problem, in regard to which his own answer was equivocal if not incoherent, the readiness with which Chairman Wickersham now tackles the world peace problem strikes me as amazing.

That problem in its present shape is in reality the localized European peace problem, and the factors to be handled in its solution are very much more difficult, not to say dangerous, than those of our wet and dry question. The latter, after all, is merely a more than usually exciting incident in the ebb and flow of American politics and will finally settle itself in the ballot box.

Today in Europe it is not homogeneous states but nations, armed and suspicious of each other, which complicate the problem of proponents of world peace.

Italy and France face each other in open defiance, and eventual war between Germany and Poland over the Polish corridor seems almost inevitable, while in the north stands Russia as a menace to all the rest of Europe.

When to this we add the fact, willfully slighted by American pacifists, that the peoples of the Old World are hopelessly heterogeneous, with a confusion of tongues and inherited hatreds which it will take generations of enlightenment to ameliorate, my wonder grows that any sane American publicist can even dream that Uncle Sam may safely enter the maelstrom of European politics.

FEDERALIST.

Is Any One Qualified to Serve as a Juror in Liquor Cases, Asks Lawyer Hill, Commenting on the Disqualification of Members of the Crusaders?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The purposes of the Crusaders, to wit, to bring about a modification or repeal of the eighteenth amendment, are supported by many of the bar associations throughout the United States, by men of the type of Pierre S. du Pont, Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad; John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, and numerous other persons of equally high standing. Many of the leading citizens of the District of Columbia are members of the local organization. Yet a member of this organization, which organization does not advocate the breaking of a law but simply advocates the bringing about, in a lawful way, the modification or the repeal of a law, is not qualified to serve as a juror in a liquor case because it is thought that such a person will be prejudiced in favor of the accused. If this be so, then by the same token a person who believes that the eighteenth amendment should remain a part of our Constitution is prejudiced in favor of the Government and therefore such a person should not serve as a juror.

Broadly speaking, we are divided into two classes; one class desires to maintain the eighteenth amendment as a part of the Constitution and the other class desires its repeal or modification. If a member of either class is disqualified to try a liquor case, then I respectfully submit that members of both classes are disqualified to serve as jurors and that there is no one left to serve upon a jury in a liquor case. F. W. HILL, Jr.

Reason Why Washington's Birthday Is Fixed on February 22 Instead of February 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. E. R. Carswell asks for information relative to the date of birth of George Washington, our first President.

February 11 (Julian Calendar) is the exact date of Washington's birth, but in 1752 all birthdays were arbitrarily advanced eleven days in order to conform to our present calendar, which was adopted at that time. This adjustment was necessary because the discarded Julian Calendar had become eleven days out of harmony with the four seasons, and the adjustment was made by eliminating eleven days from the month of September, 1752. In order to avoid an understatement of any one's age, which might possibly create legal difficulties, it was necessary to advance the annual celebration dates eleven days. Hence, under the Gregorian calendar, we now observe Washington's birthday on February 22.

Thirty-six of these 47 days I have spent in bed, in this hospital, and I have received, all down the line, the best possible medical attention and nursing, and, notwithstanding my handicap of being born too long ago—1846—I am satisfied that the splendid treatment I am receiving here will put me on my feet again.

Foreign Minister Wang Says Every Effort Will Be Made Toward Goal.

COURT SYSTEM DECRIED

Shanghai, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Foreign Minister C. T. Wang told newspapermen at a dinner tonight the Nationalist government was resolved to "exert the maximum effort" to end extraterritorial rights of foreign nations in China if present negotiations are not successful soon.

Through these rights, nationals of 21 nations have had for 80 years the privilege of trial in China in courts presided over by their own countrymen.

The Chinese government, said Mr. Wang, long had endeavored to terminate extraterritoriality, and was resolved at this time to "exert the maximum effort to attain this end, and the powers' further delay would only intensify China's efforts." He added:

"I trust China will not be forced to adopt measures to obtain this objective other than friendly negotiations."

The foreign minister recalled that in December, 1929, he issued a mandate saying abolishment of extraterritoriality in China was scheduled to begin January 1, 1930. He continued:

"Thirteen months have since elapsed and it is a matter of regret that the desired solution remains to be consummated."

The foreign powers 30 years ago indicated willingness to abolish extraterritoriality, said Mr. Wang, "when the state of Chinese laws and their administration and other considerations warranted." China, he asserted, had accomplished sufficient legal reform to meet these conditions.

Income Tax Facts

No. 12.

Several factors are involved in determining whether a person who files a return as the head of a family and claims the personal exemption of $3,500 is to be thus classified. The element of either legal or financial dependency must exist. A parent who supports in his household dependent minor children, over whom he exercises family control, is entitled to this classification. Moreover, if he supports and exercises family control over them, even though they have an income sufficient to support themselves, he still is classified as the head of a family. If, however, he does not support them but exercises family control, the common home being maintained, he can not be classified as the head of a family.

In the absence of continuous residence together, whether or not a person with dependent relatives is the head of a family depends upon the character of the separation. If a father is absent on business, or a child away at school, or even on a visit, the common home being maintained, the $3,500 exemption is allowed. Moreover, if a parent is obliged to maintain his dependent children with relatives or in a boarding house, while he lives elsewhere, the exemption still applies. If, however, without necessity, the dependent continuously makes his home elsewhere, his benefactor is not the head of a family.

The same ruling applies to husband and wife "living together." If occasionally and temporarily the wife is away on a visit or the husband on business, the common home being maintained, the $3,500 exemption applies. The unavoidable absence of a wife or husband at a sanatorium does not preclude claiming the exemption. But if the husband continuously makes his home at one place and the wife at another, they are not living together within the meaning of the act.

Two Bus Companies Refused District Entry

Because of the congestion at the bus terminals on New York avenue, near Thirteenth street, and at Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue, the Public Utilities Commission yesterday refused applications of two interstate bus lines to enter the District. The lines refused admission are the Peninsula Transit Corporation and the Safety Transit Lines, Inc.

The action was taken despite the recent ruling of the Municipal Court that the commision has no jurisdiction over out-of-town motor vehicles. Another test case is being tried in Police Court. This concerns the Great Eastern Stages' defiance of the commission refusal to permit a terminal at Fourteenth and E streets.

King Alfonso Visits Premier's Bedside

Calls on Berenguer to Get Personal Report of Pre-election Situation.

Madrid, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—King Alfonso today visited the bedside of Premier Damaso Berenguer to receive a personal report of the preelection situation which he was told was so far peaceful.

The premier's left foot is inflamed, and he is unable to walk as the result of a skin infection. But he has kept in close touch with developments throughout Spain.

A strike of some magnitude continued today at Cadiz, but authorities felt encouraged that up to today there had been no serious attempts at violence as the result of the removal on Monday of the censorship and the lifting of martial law.

Detectives Held as Bandits.

Gusdalajara, Mexico, Feb. 12 (A.P.). Federal troops today arrested Florencio Moreno and Luis Munis Diaz, the chief and assistant chief of the city detective force, charged with heading a band of robbers who had been looting stores and residences in Gusdalajara over a period of months.

Influenza Weakens; Only 2 Cases Reported

A break in the mild rise of influenza cases in the District appears to have been reached, temporarily at least, Health Officer William C. Fowler announced yesterday. Only one new case was reported then, and only one Wednesday.

For a while reports were received at the Health Department at the rate of eight and ten a day. This was far from being epidemic, but above normal. A slight decrease in pneumonia cases also was noted. Eight cases were reported.

Hunting Creek Work Soon to Be Complete

Work on Hunting Creek, the last of the fills along the Mount Vernon Memorial highway, now under construction, will be completed by the end of this month, it was said yesterday at the United States Engineer Office of the War Department.

The last of the $1,000,000 hydraulic pipe line dredge jobs will begin March 1, when work is started at Little Hunting Creek. A dredge and derrick boat already are stripping the ground in preparation for the laying of a sand and gravel roadbed.

Agriculture to Figure In Ontario's Program

Toronto, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—W. D. Ross, lieutenant governor, reading the speech from the throne today to members of the legislative assembly of the Province of Ontario, presented a legislative program in which agriculture bulks large.

Farm legislation will include special surveys of crop conditions and marketing opportunities, improvement of herds and protection of live stock against parasites.

What Today Means to You

"AQUARIUS."

IF February 13 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 10 a. m., from 2:30 p. m. to 3:45 p. m. and from 8:30 p. m. to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from noon to 1:30 p. m. and from 6 p. m. to 8 p. m.

This date marks the beginning of an eventful period in your life, full of vivid experiences. Material will be placed in your hands, which can do you an infinite amount of good, or an infinite amount of bad, according to your usage. Old ties will be broken, and new ones formed. Young folks will chafe to get away from the family nest.

Children born on this February 13 will be apt to be changeable, undecided and lacking in perseverance, so that they will not get credit for the abilities which they possess. They will be very impartial and judicial, seeing both sides of a question, and would do well in law work. Irritability is apt to mar their finer qualities.

Born on a February 13, your character is not conspicuous for its consistency, and in many phases of life you are distinctly fickle and changeable. You are curiously human, and have a philosophy of life that is broad and tolerant; you "live and let live." Your instinctive liking for travel and change urges you to voyage into unknown regions, both in the physical world and in the world of mind. You would rather risk suffering through adventure than to mope in monotony. You are, however, usually fortunate in your risks, and usually light on your feet. Your nature is adaptable, your personality is winning, and your talk convincing.

You are exceedingly generous, though you have a strong family sense and consider your home and relatives before you consider outsiders. Your loyalty is that of a clansman. Your ambitions are rather vague, and any goal which will give you comfort and interest, is as good as another to you. You are not self-centered, and your thoughts and activities are even working outward. You do not harbor resentment—that arsenic of the soul. You have sufficient self-conceit to make you rather thick-skinned to slights, and you are not looking for abuse from other people. Your indifferent attitude is a protective one, as far as you are concerned. There will be more happiness than unhappiness, in your married life. You will assure that.

Successful people born February 13:

1. Orange Scott, organized the Wesleyan Methodist Church in United States.
2. James Norman Hill, railroad official.
3. Edwin Hunter Pendelton Arden, actor, playwright.
4. Charles C. Curran, artist.
5. Wallace Bruce Amsbary, lecturer.
6. J. F. Fargo, expressman.

Dare Interprets the Mode

Green jersey and wool combined with red, yellow and white embroidery make a spring ensemble. (A New York model.)

Paris, February 12.

"The time has come," the Walrus said,
To talk of many things:
Of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax,
Of cabbages, and kings.

AND especially about the hat that the famous Agnes (pronounced An-nez) has designed for the beach. It seems to be just about as logical as everything is in this famous poem, since it isn't a hat at all but just a striped linen handkerchief • • • and another one to match it which is to be used as a scarf!

Yes, that's all the rage among Agnes-ites • • • can't you just see the plage at Biarritz dotted with sandmaids immersed in the intricacies of draping Agnes' beach hat one of the three ways that she shows you how to drape it when you buy it? Illustrated directions do not go with the purchase of this hat either, so you have to be an expert mechanic or you are going to find yourself the possessor of two linen handkerchiefs and nothing more.

The thing to do is to choose one way of wearing it and stick to it, and to stay right where you buy it until you know exactly how to drape it, know how so thoroughly that you won't forget it after the second, er—cup of tea. There are three ways that I can describe to you, and the rest you can figure out for yourself if you have a week to spare in front of a mirror.

The first way is to drape it into a turban with the ends all tucked under, if you know how to drape a turban. Second way is to put it on your head, unfolded of course, tie two ends at the back and tuck them up under, and tie the other two ends at one side and let them hang, and the third way is to roll the front up into a sort of brim and dispose of the ends as you will.

And I know of a nice clean quiet insane asylum where I'll meet you all!

Better send that stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post for the leaflet telling you to decorate a Queen of Hearts Party and make a Queen of Hearts costume, anyhow whether you are going to a party Valentine's Eve or not. Because some day you'll just be going to have a party and not know what in the world to make by way of decoration, that don't cost a fortune and take hours of time to make. The decorations for the Queen of Hearts party are very original and amusing, and very easily made. And so, too, with the Queen of Hearts costume which you can wear to this party.

Jersey and wool is smart you know, when they are combined in the same outfit. And then, there is a revival of the interest in embroidery, and all in all I think the Spring ensemble sketched for you today is quite smart, don't you? The skirt is green jersey, the coat in a light weight woolen material in the same shade of green, and the blouse and the trimming of the coat are both in another type of jersey all over embroidered with red, yellow and white. That just shows you to what a pretty pass colors have come, doesn't it?

• • • •

Only in The Sunday Washington Post, in the Capital, can you find Dare's weekly fashion letter. You should look for it each week.

Au revoir.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

THE DESIRABLE CRABAPPLE.

DID you ever consider how much time most of us devote to attaining effects that could almost be described as vanishing? Styles change or we grow tired of them. Of course, styles never change in, or in the remotest way affect, real beauty, nor, again, do we tire of real beauty. But we must admit, if we are honest, that much of the effort we expend on beautifying our homes, both in the exterior and the interior, is wasted because we are not satisfied, and so begin to rearrange. This desire for rearrangement is especially true in our gardens. We plant a huge mass of most desirable annuals this year. For same reason, possibly because we have chosen a poor location, the lovely blossoms do not look well in front of the purple asters; or, again, the seed we planted, due as much to ignorance in caring for it or improper preparation of the soil, didn't do well, so we are discouraged, and next year expend our labors in another direction.

Now, there is one variety of decorative specimen which will never disappoint us, and because its beauty increases each season, it is always satisfying. I refer to a certain variety of shrub.

If you make a wise selection of location, properly prepare the soil and purchase a specimen with a vigorous constitution, you will never regret any money or labor you will expend on this shrub. Each year your lawn will be more beautiful, because each year's development brings renewed beauty.

The shrub I wish to recommend is reliable in every way, and it is a variety that will stand the coldest climate. It will do well in any part of our country.

The shrub, or small tree—for while listed as a shrub the malus halliana, or crabapple, is really a tree—should be in every garden in this country which can provide it with necessary sunshine.

The crabapple is a lover of breeze and sunshine, and, having a rugged constitution, will grow any place the common apple flourishes. It usually proves hardy where even the ordinary apple refuses to live. A hillside or slope always suits a crabapple.

Even a small garden is made more beautiful by one or two of these miniature trees, which not only rival but really surpass the Japanese cherry when in blossom. In the late fall, when their branches are laden with brightly colored fruit, they are again radiant. The abundance of flowers and fruit produced by even one of these trees is truly astounding; I know of no shrub which will yield greater returns.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

School-Time Sickness.

Every mother knows the earache that is acute at 8:30 on a school morning, and vanishes into thin air at 9:30. Children, like adults, pretend to be sick for all sorts of reasons.

A 7-year-old boy developed a chronic cough which caused his mother to keep him out of school and to get up nights to attend to him.

A doctor's examination showed no physical trouble, and the mother was advised to send the child to school, and to pay him the least possible attention. If he coughed at night, she was not to get up to minister to him. After a week of this treatment, the cough entirely disappeared.

Pretended illness is always a sign that there is something wrong in the way the child is being handled. Although it should never serve the child's purpose of winning escape from difficulty or of getting attention, its possible motives should be carefully considered. Every effort should then be made to meet the needs which are discovered on a constructive level.

When, for instance, a child pretends to be sick (or actually believes that he is sick) when it is time to go to school, his mother should try to discover what lies behind his desire to avoid the school situation.

Sometimes it is possible to draw from the child a confession of his troubles. Often, however, he himself does not know what is the matter. A discussion with the teacher is usually helpful in bringing the difficulty to light.

Sometimes the difficulty is not in the school situation, but in the home. One little 6-year-old, for instance, disliked going to school because it left his younger brother, of whom he was jealous, at home alone with his mother.

WORK ON BRIDGE

CONTRACT BRIDGE.

With the above hand at Contract Bridge, South, West and North would pass. East probably would bid two No Trumps and after South passed, West would bid three; or after the three passes East might prefer to bid one, two or three Clubs. Over three, West would bid four; but would not bid over one or two unless the two was a forcing or artificial bid. To open by bidding Clubs on a hand with four suits stopped would be rather foolish because there are many hands which will make three No Trumps and yet fail to make five of a minor suit; and this particular hand is an example.

At Auction Bridge East probably would obtain the declaration with a bid of one No Trump.

If the hand were played with East a No Trump Declarer, South would lead the Deuce of Diamonds. West (dummy) would hold the trick with the Nine, Declarer making this play to put dummy in—if the lead had been from Ace-King.

Including the first trick, Declarer can count one Diamond, two Spades and five Clubs; one more trick is needed, and when the Ten of Diamonds holds the first trick, Declarer can be sure (if South is a conventional bidder) that it can be obtained in Hearts. South undoubtedly had the Ace-King and two other Diamonds, and may or may not have the Queen of Spades; but he cannot have the Ace of Hearts because with a four-card suit headed by Ace-King and a side Ace South as dealer would have bid. So North is clearly marked with the Ace of Hearts, and when the Diamond Nine wins, Declarer should lead three rounds of Clubs, winning the third in dummy, and to trick 5 lead the Trey of Hearts. On this trick East can play the King with perfect confidence if North plays small.

North can win trick 5 with the Ace of Hearts and return South's Diamond, and the adversaries will take three Diamond tricks; but South's original lead of the Deuce, showing four-card suit, has guaranteed that they will not take more than three in that suit, and Declarer therefore is assured of game.

The hand illustrates a case in which the failure of one player to bid enables a Declarer to mark the location of a vital card.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

WHOLE WHEAT COOKED IN THE PRESSURE COOKER.

(United States Department of Agriculture.)

Nutrition specialists urge, among other necessary foods, the frequent use of whole-grain cereals in the diet, especially in families where there are growing children. Whole wheat grains can be made very palatable by cooking them under steam pressure. The result is a breakfast cereal rich in flavor and food value, which can be eaten with milk or cream and fruit. The germ and outer layers of the wheat grain are rich in vitamins and minerals, while the rest is such an excellent source of energy for the body that wherever possible people all over the world use wheat in some form as the mainstay of their diet.

The directions for cooking whole wheat in this way are given by the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Sort the whole wheat grains and wash thoroughly. For each cup of wheat add 1½ cups cold water and soak overnight. In the morning add 1 teaspoon salt for each cup of dry wheat used and cook under 20 to 25 pounds steam pressure for at least 1 hour, or longer if very soft grains are desired. Serve in the same way as any hot cereal with milk or cream.

After the wheat has been cooked in the pressure cooker, it may be canned by the following method: Fill pint glass jars or No. 2 tin cans almost full with the boiling hot cooked wheat, seal and process at 10 pounds pressure (240 degrees F.) for 1 hour.

YOUR NAME
What Does It Mean?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

It has been observed that the family name, "Seamer," has frequently become confused with "Seymour," which means "he who comes from St. Maur," and indicates a former residence in St. Maur-des-Bois, Normandy, France. However, "Seamer" is generally derived from four purely English sources. It is sometimes a modern shortened form of the Anglo-Saxon personal name "Saemaer," which means "sea famous." Occasionally it represents the Anglo-Saxon personal name "Sigemaer," which means "victoriously famous." Thirdly, many families which bear the name "Seamer" have received it because of a former residence in the village of Seamer, Yorkshire. This placename is derived from the Old English "sae-maere," which means "the lake-boundary." Finally, a very common source of the family name "Seamer" is the old English "seamere," which means "the tailor," and which obviously indicates the occupation of the persons who were first so called. A certain Thomas Semer is mentioned in an English document of the fourteenth century.

The family name "Couchman" is of English and French origin. It has come down to us from two sources, according to which it may mean "the upholsterer" or "the coachman." It is one of the many family names which indicate the occupation of the persons who were first so called. An English church register of the year 1669 records the marriage of a certain Allise Couchman.

The family name "Gimbel" is of German origin. It is a modern shortened form of "Gundobald." "Gundobald" was an old personal name which may be translated "strong battle" or "battle-mighty."

FRANCES M'DONALD

What Is an Old Maid?

THERESE today asks a question that is hard to answer. She wants to know just what and why is an "old maid?"

Although the phrase and almost the thought has passed out of usage the actuality exists and always will.

In our opinion an "old maid" is a woman who has never recognized her own charms or the charms of the opposite sex. There are few women on earth who have no charms. Many of the most devotedly loved women in the world are women who are undeniably plain. They have, however, the poise and confidence of the woman who sees the attractions of others and recognizes the attractions that are hers. Such a woman is pleased and happy. She radiates a sort of general satisfaction with life and what it has done for her. She feels safe and contented with men. She likes children and good food. She is comfortable.

Her unmarried sister, otherwise referred to as an "old maid," is a woman who thinks it silly to doll up and wicked to use perfume and foolish to stand in front of a mirror curling your hair. She thinks men are strange creatures that will bear watching. She never saw one she couldn't live without. If a man is nice to her she wonders what he wants. Or thinks he feels sorry for her, bristles all over and squelches him. She was probably told not to look at boys when she was 7 or 8 and was so impressed with the instructions that she turned around and went the other way when she saw a boy coming.

"Old maids" are seldom born. They are made. They are straight-haired daughters of a curly-haired mother, whose idea of beauty was curly hair. They were therefore hopeless. At parties they shrank into corners from which they watched other little girls being kissed. Something in them shriveled. They learned to hate parties and girls who got kissed. And boys who kissed only curly-haired girls. They grew up in their corners —looking out upon a world that was a jumble of things in which they had no part.

The "old maid" is a woman who was sold the idea that she did not matter. She is often a beauty, but looks unattractive, while unattractive women all about her look like beauties. "Old maids" are people who have watched happiness brush past them. And they are tired of watching. They are usually the finest and most sensitive of women, the tenderest and the most loyal. They are almost invariably women whose mothers considered them unattractive—and told them so—feelingly.

At least that is the way we have figured out the "old maid" question—and we have been figuring about it for some time. Now read what Therese says of herself:

"Do tell me what makes a girl turn out an old maid. Why are there old maids like me? I have as good looks as most girls, but never get anywhere. My sisters are not so good looking, but they are all married happily. What is wrong with me that the minute I have a date I am in a panic and look my very worst? I get tongue-tied the minute a man comes near me where other girls always get chatty and vivacious with men. Honestly, I would rather never have a date, except that the family keeps after me for being so unpopular. When I was a child I always wore my sisters' things as they outgrew them. I always felt rumbled, and looked it. I never had a pair of new gloves until I was 14. I was squeezed into tight sleeves and flopped around in big shoes. I always was and still am a sort of leave-over. At a dance I always feel the men who dance with me are doing so out of kindness and get rid of them as soon as possible. I die a thousand deaths each time I go out where other women are laughing so easily and having such a good time. I can never start a conversation with a man to save my life. Other women come into a room just beaming on everyone and all I want is to die. Yet I am not shy and in business get on finely. It is the man idea that stumps me. I feel they are pitying me or wishing all women like myself would stay at home so they would not draw them as partners and spoil an evening. At week-end parties I am just beginning to be a little less miserable by the time the party breaks up. The rest by that time are old friends making dates for the coming week and hating to say good-by. I am just present and that is about all. Would you tell me how one girl in a family is born that way while all the rest take life as a joke and enjoy every minute? What makes an old maid get that way?

THERESE.

We would love the experiment of seeing Therese go where she would neither see nor hear her family, dress in the things that were meant for her type, and be herself with a group of perfect strangers. One understanding man could cure Therese—for like other "old maids" this one was made, not born that way. May some man find it out before it is too late!

Kotex stays soft

because it absorbs away from the surface

KOTEX is soft not only at first but all during use. You see, it absorbs laterally, away from the surface, leaving the protective area dry and comfortable.

It can be worn with equal safety, equal protection on either side. It is adjustable. Layers can be removed as your needs change.

Gowns fit smoothly when Kotex is your sanitary protection. Corners are rounded and tapered so that Kotex fits securely.

It deodorizes. There are so many ways in which this sanitary pad is superior. Hospitals have found this out. They specify Kotex . . . buy millions of pads a year. What greater assurance could you ask of hygienic safety?

Remember, too, that Kotex is disposable. That fact has turned millions of women to this modern sanitary protection.

The Life Story of Gen. Wood

By HERMANN HAGEDORN

CHAPTER XLI.

By March, 1920, in spite of confusion of counsel in the management of his campaign Gen. Wood's candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination was making progress. A New York newspaper correspondent returning from a trip of observation over the country, reported that Wood was everywhere in the lead. It was not only that the majority of the public seemed to be for him; but he appeared to have more friends among Republican party workers than any other candidate.

William Cooper Procter, manager of his campaign, recognized that Wood's strength lay with the people, determined, through victories in the States which held preferential primaries, to give his candidacy such an impetus that the Old Guard would not be able to block it in the convention. But the unregenerate, it happened, knew more of the possibilities of the primaries than the children of light.

Here and there were signs that the other candidates were combining to keep down the number of Wood delegates. In Nebraska, Gen. Pershing, whom no one regarded seriously as a candidate, was persuaded to let his name be used in order to divide the soldier vote. In several States Senator Johnson, it was said, was encouraged by the Old Guard to enter the primaries in order to win some of the "Roosevelt vote" from Wood. In Maryland, on the other hand, Harding and Lowden made no contest so that Johnson would have a clear field against the one man they all feared.

Agreement Is Understood.

"According to a prevailing understanding," wrote a correspondent, there was a "gentlemen's agreement" among the managers of Lowden, Harding and Johnson that none of the three should conflict with the others in the primaries, "the object being to prevent Gen. Wood from continuing the great headway he was making among the voters."

The political warhorses were not above resorting to time-honored tricks. In Michigan they placed a certain Arthur Wood on the ballot; in Pennsylvania they fundamentally affected the result with a certain unknown Edward Wood, who won thousands of votes intended for the general.

Took Primaries Seriously.

It was perhaps the clearest sign of Wood's political innocence that he took the primaries seriously. In March he invaded South Dakota for a brief speaking tour. The governor was a burly Swede named Peter Norbeck, a stalwart, attractive and exceptionally able man who had met Wood the preceding summer at the dedication of a tower in memory of Roosevelt on a mountain outside Deadwood. The rugged farmer-politician fell completely under Wood's spell. "He hypnotized me," he said long afterward. "I never meet another man who had the same effect on me. I would have signed anything on the dotted line, blindfolded, at any time that Wood asked me to. I don't doubt but that he made mistakes of judgment, but I believed so absolutely in his sincerity that I would have been willing to trust my reputation to him. I have never seen any one who impressed me as having such singleness of purpose."

Norbeck found only one fault with him and that was his uniform. He did not know how his farmers, or their women, would take it, and begged Wood to appear in civilian clothes; but Wood pointed out that South Dakota was in his department, and, after all, it was the uniform in which many men of the State had gallantly died.

Audiences Captured.

Something in Wood's rugged personality, in his strombeaten face and his simple appeal to the Constitution and the Ten Commandments, captured his audiences. Everywhere he spoke to packed, enthusiastic houses. He roused the women of the State, curiously, as they had never been roused in behalf of any candidate. The governor's wife, a fine plainswoman, was stirred by his unvarying courtesy, and noted with satisfaction how gayly he bore the discomforts of winter campaigning.

The weather, indeed, did its worst. Wood faced it in automobiles, wagons, even on switch engines. Motoring from Clear Lake, where he had made three speeches, to Watertown, where he was due for two or three more, a blizzard drove him back to his starting point. Since no train was available for hours, Wood suggested a handcar. With a section hand at the motor and Wood huddled with one or two others without shelter behind him, the car drove into the blinding storm. A quarter of a mile out of Clear Lake, at a crossing, they crashed into a milk wagon. Wood, flung into a ditch, picked himself up quickly and looked about for the driver of the wagon.

He found him crawling out of the wreck, a fine old farmer who blinked as he looked up at Wood. "Why, Gen. Wood! I've always wanted to meet you, but I never expected it would be this way. Never mind about me. I'm perfectly all right and I can fix up the wagon. Just you go right along."

Debated on League.

At Pierre, Wood held a joint debate with Senator Miles Poindexter on the League of Nations. Wood was dubious of the effectiveness of any international organization in preventing war, but, so long as American sovereignity was left unimpaired, believed that every effort should be made to compose differences between nations before resorting to armed conflict.

Poindexter was opposed not only to the League of Nations, but to all traffic with Europe whatsoever. What right, he asked, had Congress to make a gift of $100,000,000 to feed the starving of Europe? Were there not plenty of ways for the Government to spend money in America? Did South Dakota need no roads, no irrigation projects, no schools?

As Poindexter resumed his seat, Wood came forward. "I refuse to disagree violently with my friend the senator," he began, with deceptive composure. Then with a brusqueness which was close to anger, he exclaimed, "But I believe I know the American people. I do not believe you are objecting to a Christian act. If you do, you are not fit to be Americans."

Instantly the audience burst into tense and prolonged applause. It had been on Wood's part an utterance of spontaneous indignation. In his circumstances, it called for courage, for the audience, in its applause of Poindexter, had shown well enough where, in respect to the league, its sympathies lay. It was clear that though the occasion might be a joint debate, it was not, so far as Wood was concerned, a contest in popularity, a competition in winning the favor of the audience, or, if it were such a competition, he was willing to risk losing it to show his honest feelings.

Urges Aid for Needy.

"Let us get down to brass tacks on this business of spending money. We have now in our possession the bulk of the wealth of the world. Millions of people are dying on the other side. Are you a people to deny them food and medicine and clothing?"

There were cries of "No, No!"—and applause.

"If you were, you would be unfit to live under the American flag."

The audience, having caught a flash of his quality, took him to its heart. He felt that, and ceased to stand on a hill, as it were, apart, bombarding a citadel with heavy artillery, as his habit was, and spoke as he was accustomed to speak among intimates.

"We don't want anything to do with the boundaries of Europe. I think it has been a frightful mistake for us to intervene in questions of boundaries; but I think it would have been a crime if we had failed to intervene in the matter of feeding thousands who were starving, and clothing the naked and sheltering the homeless in a war which was as much our war as the war of Europe. * * *

"We can build our roads also. We can do other things. We can develop our country. But we went into this war; some 50,000 of our dead now lie wrapped in the common winding sheet of the soil of France and Flanders. What did they die for? They died for civilization and humanity. What does that mean? That we are going to stop the moment the fighting is over? That we are not going to feed anybody; not going to help anybody? Going to allow Europe to die? Is that your idea? It certainly is not the idea of the American people. We have an obligation just as we have an obligation in every city in this country. There is no legal obligation for you to feed the poor or take a wounded man to the hospital or to help a cripple, but there is a moral obligation, and there is a moral obligation on this country to do all it can to alleviate the suffering in Europe."

His Speech an Ovation.

Applause interrupted him again and again. He had won the affectionate approval of his audience, and everything he said stirred their enthusiasm. His closing speech was almost a continuous ovation.

"Had debate with Poindexter," Wood wrote in his diary, March 20. "He evidently was hunting trouble. I think he got it before we were through."

On his return from South Dakota Wood found his managers once more in conflict. Frank Hitchcock, who had been Taft's Postmaster General, had recently joined Wood's forces and was struggling with Procter over the question of the primaries in States which had "favorite sons." The fight cut deep into Wood's organization, for the Eastern managers stood by Hitchcock, the Westerners by Procter.

An attack from without served to bring for the moment a patched-up peace. Charges by Hiram Johnson, in the course of the primary campaign in South Dakota, that the campaign managers of Wood and Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, were expending excessive sums, were followed by a blast from Senator Borah, proclaiming with customary moderation, a "saturnalia of corruption." A "plot" was afoot "to buy the Presidency."

The yellow press rang the changes on the "conspiracy." It was said that at a dinner at the house of Henry C. Frick, president of the United States Steel Corporation, some 30 magnates had pledged $1,000,000 to "put Wood over." Borah called for a congressional investigation.

As a political intrigue designed to impede the progress of the two leading candidacies for the nomination, the enterprise was effective. It appeared that Lowdon had spent approximately $500,000 of his own money, which was legitimate enough, but one of his managers had used $5,000 of it to bribe two delegates in Missouri, which made ugly reading. John King, for all his dire threats and the suspicion that it had been he who had stirred Borah and Johnson to the attack, helped rather than hurt Wood's cause.

Case Hurt by Inquiry.

The talk of a plot by the magnate was all nonsense. He had been at the Frick dinner himself, and campaign funds had not even been discussed. Borah's "saturnalia," indeed, simmered down to the fact that appoximately $1,200,000 had been spent by the national Wood organization, mainly for advertising, printing and postage. The only "magnates" who had contributed substantial sums were Procter, who had given or underwritten approximately $710,000, and Ambrose Monell, who had given $100,000. All efforts to prove that the high-minded soap manufacturer was actually the representative of a sinister group intent on "purchasing the Presidency" failed dismally.

The investigation hurt Wood, though it hurt Lowden more. Most of all it hurt Johnson, for it provided campaign material for the Democrats and angered Republican politicians everywhere. The main result of the tumult and the shouting was that the two tribunes of the people, Borah and Johnson, clamoring to "foil" the "interests," had, with rare prescience, smoothed the way for the one candidate whom the financial interests could unquestionably impress.

It was a tribute to the extraordinary vitality of his candidacy that neither the confusion of its management nor the demagogic outcries regarding its funds seemed able seriously to impede its march. Wood's successive victories in the primaries were comparable only to Roosevelt's sweep in 1912. A poll taken during the spring by "The Literary Digest" deepened the impression that Wood was the man whom the majority of Americans wanted for President. His closest rivals were Johnson and Hoover. Wood had seven times the votes of Harding; eight times the votes of Coolidge.

A laboring man, asked, after an address by Wood in New York, why he was for him, expressed what appeared to be the feeling of a large part of the public: "Somehow he makes you feel so steady."

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

SUNDAY openings in the National Theater are rare, especially at this season, when Mr. E. M. Newman, the traveltalker, comes to town with his interesting series of pictures. This coming Sunday, however, Mr. Newman will give way to Brock Pemberton's outstanding stage success, "Strictly Dishonorable." It comes here after 80-odd weeks in New York and way stations. Newman will appear only at matinee, with "Switzerland."

* * * *

On the next night—Monday, the 16th—Miss Jane Cowl will open in the Belasco Theater in a two-play repertoire. For the first four performances she will be seen in "Art and Mrs. Bottle," a comely little play that is downright comedy. Beginning Thursday night of that week, Miss Jane will essay a Shakespearean role. She and her company then appear in "Twelfth Night."

* * * *

Those who like to follow the fortunes of plays that were seen here earlier in the season—especially plays that had their premieres in Washington—will want to know about "In the Best of Families," that rowdy-dowdy comedy that got started in the Belasco several weeks ago. Well, it was on its way to the storehouse after only eight performances in New York, when the cast got together and went co-op. Another piece of drama that really bit the dust after leaving here was "Storm Song," the starring vehicle for Francine Larrimore. "In the Best of Families" may be saved, but it's doubtful.

* * * *

George M. Tyler, the beloved producer, who has a penchant for going back into the archives and dragging out interesting pieces of drama, is now making ready for a revival of J. M. Barrie's comedy, "The Admirable Crichton." It was first done in London with Sir Henry Irving in the title role and in New York with Mr. William Gillette playing the part. Rumor now has it that the American actor who staged "a comeback" last year in "Sherlock Holmes" is coming out of retirement again—to make a tour of the country. If so, Washington will be on the route, as this is Mr. Tyler's favorite city.

* * * *

Baltimore gets the first showing of the Theater Guild production, Schnitzler's "The Lonely Way." The play comes here week after next. It isn't very often that theatergoers in America have a chance at Arthur Schnitzler's work. New York is now enjoying a revival of his "Anatole," with Joseph Schildkraut in the role onced graced—and admirably—by John Barrymore. At the present moment the New York play reviewers are doing that odious thing, comparison, holding up the performance of Sir John against that of Sir Joseph.

To recall another memory, "America's Sweetheart," the mammoth musical comedy seen here in the National two weeks ago, is now one of the top-notchers in the New York list of what's what in the world of entertainment. Very little was done to the piece after it left here, and all of the high lights that made good on E street are still the high lights on Broadway, which shows, probably, that the two towns think alike—after all.

'Twas to be expected that there would be a lot of fun in Harry Delf's farce, "She Lived Next to the Fire House," which got started in New York an evening or so ago; but it turned out to be such ribald fun that shades of censorship again show black against the white lights of Manhattan. The big moment in this play is when the town is burning down and the boys of Company 13 are all found over in Deliah Smith's parlor, having a fire drill.

* * * *

Harry Hervey, who wrote that piece called "Congai," in which Helen Menken went Oriental, has now collaborated with Carlton Hildreth on a play dealing with life and times in a West African penal colony—of all places. It is called "The Iron Widow," and there is talk that Selena Owen, seen here recently in "The Blue Ghost," will have the lead role.

G. W. U. Women's Team Opens Debates Tonight

A team of George Washington University women debaters, including Bertha Kauffman, Elizabeth Wheeler and Louise Feinstein, will open the intercollegiate debate season for women tonight when they will meet a visiting team from Swarthmore College.

The debate will be held at 8 p. m., in Corcoran Hall, the subject being: "Resolved, That the several States should adopt legislation providing for unemployment insurance." The George Washington debaters will uphold the affirmative. Mrs. Vinnie G. Barrows, director of women's personal guidance in the university, will preside at the debate.

Alpha Kappa Phi to Give Dance.

Gamma Chapter of the Alpha Kappa Phi fraternity will be host at a large dance from 10 to 2 o'clock tonight in the National Press Club auditorium. Several months have been spent by a committee in preparation for the event. Music will be furnished by a popular eight-piece orchestra.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood—The old, old story "East Lynn," dear to the hearts of repertoire companies in the days of the gas light circuits, has come to the movies again—for the sixth time. How often it has appeared as something else will never be known.

CLIVE BROOK

The story is one that seems to get better with each telling. No matter how well one knows the play, it is such good melodrama that it is always enjoyable.

As nearly every one remembers, or should, it concerns the wife who is cast out of her husband's home and away from her child because of an apparent indiscretion.

This new version gives the story the most elaborate treatment it has ever received. Its cast includes Ann Harding, who is superb, as usual; Clive Brook and Conrad Nagel. In addition there are Beryl Mercer and the old-time stage favorite, Cecelia (Cissie) Loftus.

It is interesting to note that none of the players nor the director is under the Fox banner, although it is a Fox picture. Miss Harding was borrowed from Pathe, Nagel from M-G-M, Brook from Paramount and the director, Frank Lloyd, from First National.

"Papa Spank—"

Various means are employed by studios from time to time to discipline temperamental actors. One of the most effective is keeping the player off the screen.

Strange as it may seem, an actress would rather keep busy at $500 a week than be idle at $1,000 each pay day. To be off the screen a year means virtually to be forgotten.

When Leslie Fenton, in demand as a leading man, left for a tramping tour through Europe, he knew he was sacrificing what box-office drawing power he had built up. On his return the best part he could get for a new start up the ladder was that of an off-stage voice.

Hiding at Home.

When Clara Bow wanted to "get away from it all" and take a rest following her recent court appearances, she could find no place where she could be free from the peering eyes and interested ears of the curious. So she stayed at home and kept her public contacts to a minimum.

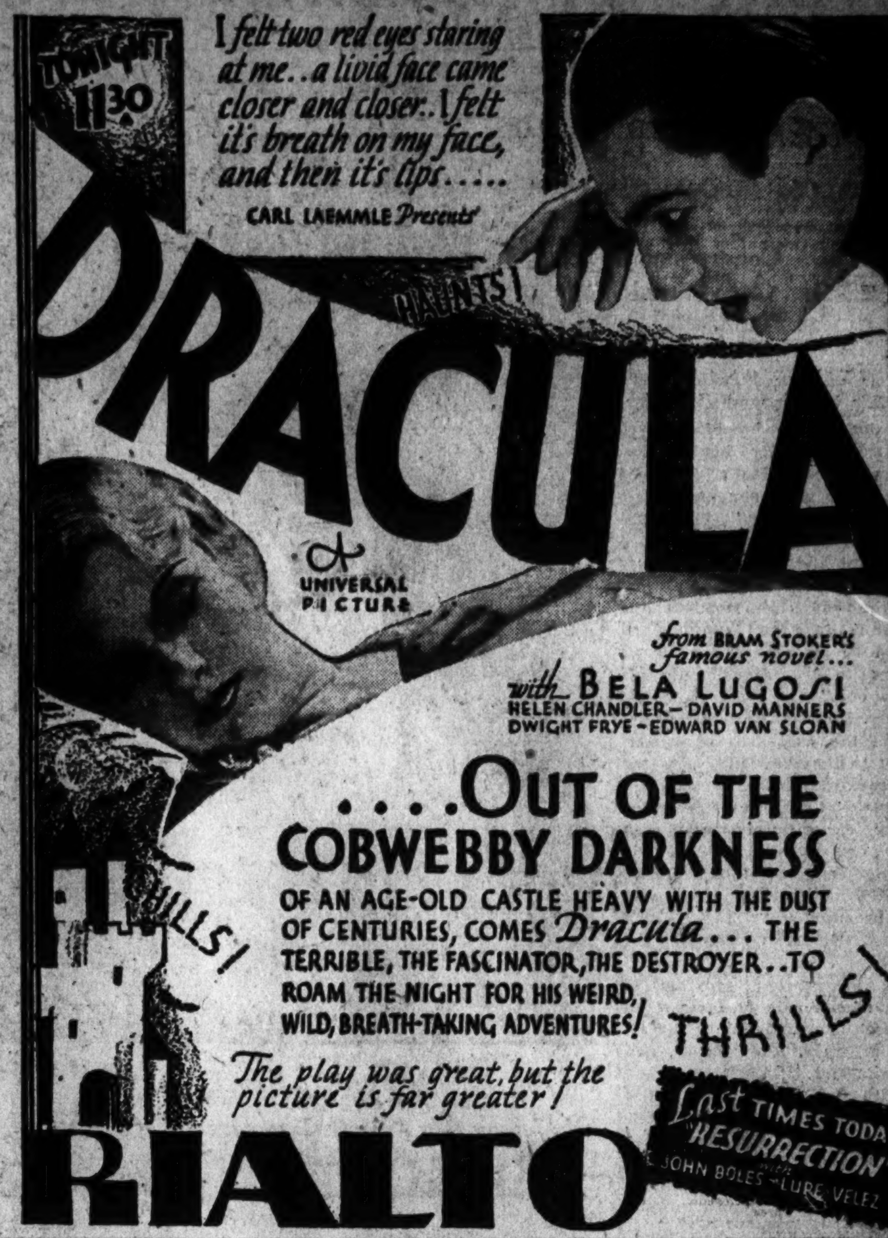

Warner Baxter has solved the problem. He advertises that he is leaving for any one of a half dozen nearby resorts. Then he has his phone number changed and stays home.

Geographic Will Hear Of Canoe Adventures

Mr. Burg will tell of his canoe adventures along the Snake and Columbia Rivers when he lectures before the National Geographic Society at the Washington Auditorium this evening.

He will use motion pictures and color slides to depict the natural beauties and scenic wonders of these areas.

Club Surprise Party Is Given Mrs. Hoover

300 at Congressional Breakfast, Gorodnitzki at Piano.

"TURNING the tables" on her hostesses at the Congressional Club breakfast given yesterday in her honor, Mrs. Hoover brought to a delightful climax the party announced as a "surprise program." For tradition was cast to the winds when the First Lady rose at the close of the musical numbers to express to the 300 club members the "wish that she were 30 people and could be seated at each of the tables to get acquainted with every one."

Mrs. Hoover's graceful gesture added the final dash of spontaneity to the function. Heralded for some time as a program "of surprise," the breakfast crowned the season for the club which each year entertains for the First Lady. Yesterday the president, Mrs. Porter H. Dale, presented in the program a brilliant Russian pianist, Sascha Gorodnitzki, of New York.

He presented a program of classical numbers in contrast to the jazz hour afforded by the artist last year, Rudy Vallee, and his orchestra.

With several Cabinet ladies present, one or two former presidents of the club and members of the board of directors seated at the honor table, the party assumed a distinct "air" that approached a state function.

At the guest table were Mrs. Hoover, at the right of Mrs. Dale; Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, who came, cane and all (having twisted an ankle the day before and missed the White House reception that evening); Mrs. Ray Lyman Wilbur, Mrs. William N. Doak, Mrs. Leonidas C. Dyer, wife of the representative from Missouri, and newly elected president of the club.

Also at the guest table were the vice president, Mrs. C. William Ramseyer; the past presidents of the club, Mrs. Atlee Pomerene, of Ohio; Mrs. Irvin Lenroot and Mrs. Lindley Hadley, Mrs. Burns, of South Carolina, a former president, "is lost" somewhere, as her departure from the South was duly scheduled and her presence at breakfast duly expected. But Mrs. Burns failed to arrive.

The members of the board at the guest table included all in town: Mrs. Clarence F. Lea, Mrs. S. Wallace Dempsey, Mrs. Tom Connally, Mrs. David A. Reed, Mrs. Joe Crail and Mrs. Clay Stone Briggs.

Spring flowers, in the soft shades of daffodils and sweet peas conibined with acacia (sent from California), formed a decorative center for each table. Handsome programs engraved with a portrait of Mrs. Hoover and with an artistic cover bearing an engraving of the clubhouse on New Hampshire avenue were at each place.

A group of brilliantly executed piano numbers was presented by M. Gorodnitzki. A resident now of New York, the Russian musician recently won the Schubert memorial competition and appeared with success in the Carnegie Hall only last week. His playing merited the ovation extended, and additional interest is lent to his personality through his skill in tennis, which is almost as great a hobby with him as the piano.

Among those at the breakfast were Mrs. Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Henry W. Keyes, Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, Mrs. John J. Cochran, Mrs. Clarence F. Dill, Mrs. Reed Smoot, Mrs. Cameron Morrison, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, Miss Dorothy Steckel, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Mrs. William F. Kopp and Mrs. William A. Eaton.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 13, 1906.

William Jennings Bryan, writing from Hongkong, sent his resignation as trustee of Illinois College, declaring that he would not serve a school where the board of trustees were in favor of accepting funds from "Carnegie or any other trust owners who are attempting to prevent the teaching of economic truth."

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, left Washington for Columbia to engage in one of the hottest political fights of his career.

Miss Grace P. Thurston, eldest daughter of Senator John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, died at Columbia Hospital following an operation.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

TRENCH MOUTH.

THE dentists continue to supply information on trench mouth. Vincent was convinced that this malady was highly prevalent during the French revolution, and for a number of years thereafter it was frequently encountered in garrisons and on board naval vessels. While it has been somewhat prevalent all the time since the French revolution, or perhaps before that, it did not become a matter of great public interest until the World War. The people heard of it first as having prevailed among overseas troops. They hear of it now as a common disorder among the people.

Dr. Benjamin Sandy is of the opinion that the microbes which cause it are found in a great many mouths, particularly if the teeth and tongue are not kept very clean. Something happens and the germs which are lying innocent and harmless on the teeth bore into the tissues and start up the disease.

To prevent the disorder the teeth should be kept clean. He advocates using the toothbrush in a way that gets the bristles between the teeth and along the fissures. He does not think there is much need for, or any advantage in, using the brush to polish any of the flat surfaces of the teeth. He advocates washing the teeth and mouth as a preventive; and, preliminary to doing anything in the way of dental work, with a solution of perborate of soda.

His treatment, which only a dentist can give, is first to wipe off the ulcers with a soft pledget of cotton. Then wash the mouth with a half and half solution of peroxide, after which some dry neosalvarsan is dusted on the surface of the ulcer. The patient takes perborate of soda home with him, makes a solution of it, and washes his mouth with it about eight times a day for a week, and about three times a day for several weeks.

The solution is made by dissolving one teaspoonful of the salt in three-quarters of a glass of hot water. After-treatment of the gums by washing with this solution, and cleaning of the teeth, Dr. Sandy thinks is essential to complete cure of trench mouth.

COLD AND FEVER SORES.

C. A. B. writes: 1. Tell me what causes cold sores or fever sores on the lips. I have three to five every year, mostly in the wintertime, and about four out of five are on my upper lip. They are usually large and painful, and last from three to five days and are accompanied by considerable swelling. After the first day they have a clear, transparent, watery discharge until they start to dry up.

2. Is there anything used to kill them when you first notice their appearance? Some people say it is stomach disturbance or bad elimination, but I am never bothered that way. Also, I have these sores when there is no evidence of a cold present.

REPLY.

1. Cold sores, or fever sores, on the lips are the result of an infection with a virus. If you can discover what this is and what gateway it is entering through, you will be on the road. How about your sinuses?

2. Most people apply camphor to cold sores.

YOU can't do your best if you are only one half well

NO MATTER how conscientious you are—no matter how anxious you are to do your best, it just cannot be done consistently day in and day out, when you are only one-half well.

Body weakness, lack of appetite, underweight, paleness, sallow complexion, pimples and boils are symptoms of a low blood count. These may indicate that you need S.S.S.

S.S.S. restores the red-blood-cells to normal. Your appetite picks up, your whole body is strengthened, invigorated—you feel like yourself again!

If your red-blood-cells are below normal try S.S.S. Its successful record of over 100 years in building red-cells in the blood is a guarantee of satisfaction.

How to recognize a low blood count

Fatigue without any apparent cause, sluggishness, loss of appetite, loss of body weight, paleness, boils and pimples are outstanding symptoms of a LOW RED-BLOOD-CELL COUNT. The red-cells are your body builders. They carry nourishment to every part of the body. Also, they remove impurities from the tissues. When your red-cells drop to 80 per cent of normal strength, you haven't the proper number of workers to keep you "fit." 60 per cent of normal is dangerous.

(Left) Microscopic view of healthy red-blood-cells. The blood stream should contain about 5,000,000 of these cells to the cubic millimeter. They carry nourishment and oxygen to every part of the body. Also, they remove impurities from the tissues.

(Right) Anemic red-blood-cells—only 60 per cent of normal strength—they lack the power to resist infection and disease or to rebuild flesh and to carry away the impurities. Such a condition is responsible for body weakness, loss of appetite, underweight, paleness, sallow complexion, boils and pimples.

CAPITAL ATHLETES FAIL IN MEADOWBROOK GAMES

Westbrook Pegler Says

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—In connection with the annual exhibition of thoroughbred dogs, it always occurs to me that these dogs are no more like the ordinary dog than the little aristocrat, walking with nurse in Central Park and keeping his feet dry, is like Eugene Field's young man who loved to chaw green apples and go swimmin' in the lake.

This may seem to bespeak a prejudice against the little aristocrat and also against the bench dog; and, if so, all right. The tradition of the time and place of my youth had it that a clean face and, in summer time, shoes and stockings, were objectionable traits in a young man. The humor of the magazines and newspapers dealt unkindly with the aristocratic mother who did not attend to her own offspring but delegated much of this duty to the nurse, even though the little man out walking in Central Park could be proved to be better off than the kid who chawed green apples and so forth.

A lot of the latter were drowned or run over by box cars or fell through the ice in winter, due to the absence of any nurses or mounted policemen, and it did not follow that because the barefoot boy was more free and independent he must grow up more manly and admirable. Lots of them grew up to be bums.

MANY GREW UP TO BE BUMS.

Still, I must believe that there are a lot of people who can not pass a little aristocrat riding his velocipede in the park, with his governess close by, but that they instinctively curl a lip and instinctively mutter "Sissy."

These dog-show dogs are the aristocrats' dogs of course. They cost a lot of money, whereas an ordinary dog is a giveaway dog or a 75-cent dog at most. But the disconcerting thing about them is that under their barber shop curls and their manicured claws, and notwithstanding their owners' commercialism, they are just as friendly and humorous and mischievous as the commonest yellow mongrel of the sentimental mid-Western conception. I am afraid they are pretty good dogs, considered apart from their surroundings. An aristocrat is as good as a democrat if he behaves himself.

The professional dog raisers and exploiters I can not sympathize with. If they loved dogs with that touching sympathy which they appeal to in the customers when they wish to sell their stock, they would not be willing to sell. For don't they tell people that the dog is man's most faithful and forgiving pal and don't they pose their little puppies and yearlings in such mischievous attitudes and with such comic expressions that the customers can not resist buying them? And would a true lover of the dog sell away his best pals as a business, setting an arbitrary price on each?

SENTIMENT LACKING IN BUSINESS

There is no doubt that the sentiment of the dog has been exaggerated. Conceding that dogs are almost human, as the lovers of the dog are fond of contending, it must be conceded, also, by any one who has observed them, that there are phonies and rotters and miscellaneous no-goods among them. I saw an informal dog-fight not long ago. A sort of collie and a kind of hound met in front of a country grocery store, and the collie, so to speak, apparently called the hound, as it were, a very opprobrious name. The hound's neck-hair came up and he scratched some gravel and skinned his lips back off his teeth in an expression that plainly said, "I am; am I? Well, you are a ——."

At that the collie made a pass and the hound let fly and the collie went down badly frightened, with his legs up and his eyes almost all white with fear. The hound held him that way for a few seconds, glaring down at him and muttering, "Why, I ought to kill you, but you're no good so I'm going to let you up and chase you back under the garage so everybody can see you tear."

So he stepped back and the collie jumped up, but as soon as the collie got up he began to yell for his pal, Joe, another sort of collie with a little setter in him and, maybe, some Scottie, for his forelegs were slightly bowed. Joe is a neighborhood character. He does some rabbit-running and plays with the kids and is a very devil of a fellow with the opposing sex for miles around. Joe came tearing out around the gasoline pumps, and his master, Ernest Schilling, a fellow who was shot up and gassed in

Stadium Here Is Urged by Navy Head

Athletic Director of Annapolis Sees Need for Capital.

Believes Griffith Park Too Small for Maryland Game.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 12.—Capt. Henry D. Cooke, director of athletics at the Naval Academy, feels that the midshipmen should have a stadium in Washington. He opines that such an athletic arena in the National Capital would be of decided advantage both to the city and the naval contingent.

Speaking on the subject of stadiums, Capt. Cooke remarked: "There have been many advocates for a stadium here in Annapolis where admission could be charged, but such a project, if carried out, would, I believe, kill the goose that lays the golden egg. We should never get the crowds here. Baltimore and Washington afford excellent locations for near-home games, and a stadium in Washington would be a great asset. I think that some of the large fund that is to be spent there for public buildings and for beautifying the city could be used to good advantage in erecting such a stadium."

Navy and Maryland Scheduled Here.

Navy will next year play its first game in Washington since 1922, meeting the University of Maryland there. It is felt here, however, that Griffith Stadium is hardly suitable to seat the throng which will seek to witness the game. "Washington, being the National Capital, a closer contact should be instituted between it and the Naval Academy," Capt. Cooke adds.

Capt. Cooke is one of the group that believes football is not over-emphasized. He terms football an asset to any college and gate receipts a necessity to carry on other collegiate and intra-mural activities. He opines that intra-mural sports can not exist without varsity sports to lend the incentive.

C. U. Boxers Depart For Bucknell Match

Catholic University's boxing team, with a slightly revamped line-up, leaves tonight for Lewisburg, Pa., where tomorrow it engages the hardy Bisons of Bucknell. Johnny DePasquale, star bantamweight of last year's team, has stepped up a notch to the featherweight class, thus replacing Bill Calabrese, while Johnny Lyons, promising freshman, has taken over the light heavyweight duties in order to allow Danny Pyne to serve as heavyweight in place of Ed Lennon, who is ill.

This is Catholic's second match, the Card mitt wielders having spanked Massachusetts Tech, 6-1. They are especially desirous of defeating the Bisons who defeated them here last winter, 5-2.

School Heads Find No Need For Action

Principals Discover No Basis for Ineligibility Reports.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

EASTERN shares the high school basket ball championship with Central, and there will be no playoff, it was definitely decided yesterday by the high school principals, who met in solemn conclave in a rickety loft at Business High School. Pursuing the specter of ineligibility further, the school heads delved into the alleged irregularities in local high school basket ball and after mighty labor begot, for the press, a brace of decisions typed on the brand of paper used by the typewriter students down stairs. They follow:

"1. The principals discussed the charges growing out of newspaper accounts of ineligibility in athletics and found that there was no justification for such reports.

"2. The principals feel that informal scrimmage practice on playground and Community Center courts does not constitute a violation of eligibility rules."

Central Players Cleared.

The decision marked No. 1 clears Central of all doubt as to the eligibility of Gene Swift and Phil Fox, guards, who were said to have engaged in playground games, which is in spirit a violation of the rules calling for no outside play during the high school basket ball season. This decision was also flexible enough to include the alleged case of Ben Zola, Eastern guard, against whom no action was taken despite reports that he played in a game outside the pale of high school competition under the alias of "Murphy."

In certain respects decision No. 2 clashes in structure with decision No. 1. Decision No. 1 takes an ill-concealed poke at the press' bugle by assuming that the ineligibility charges were brewed by the Fourth Estate itself and seems to take a measure of satisfaction in repudiating the charges, yet the second decision takes almost plagiaristic cognizance of the recent suggestion of The Post that a rule banning playground participation possessed futile aspects.

Coach Boyd Is Present.

Artie Boyd, coach of Tech's team, put in an appearance at the scene of the meeting yesterday accompanied by Waverly Wheeler, a forward who became ineligible on the day of the fatal Tech-Central game but appeared on the court, by the way of a "make-up" examination, for the next game Tech played. Boyd's and his player's presence was at the request of H Dale Davis, Tech's representative at the caucus. Boyd was not called in to testify, although he was ready to do so, and appeared to have enough facts and figures at his fingertips to throw the series standings, and the principals, into more of a chaos.

The motion of the principals in previously deciding against McKinley in the case of Everett Johnson, and their failure to find Central or Eastern at fault, yesterday, costs Tech its honor of sharing in or winning outright the last three school basket ball titles—an attainment of no mean proportions.

Principals Unwilling To Risk Play-Off.

The principals, as a body, having deadlocked the series' title, therefore seem unwilling to face the consequences. No doubt they were influenced by the historic Central-Eastern game of 1926 at the Arcade, which ended in a state bordering closely on a riot. Whether the present crop of high school students are better or worse than their predecessors will not be known this year, at least by the test of a play-off game, since the principals have not only washed their hands of the affair, but thrown the water away.

The school heads who participated in the exchange of ideas were Messrs. Allen Davis, Business, chairman of the board of school heads; Charles Hart, Eastern; Harvey A. Smith, Central; H. Dale Davis, proxy for Frank Daniels, of Tech, and Dr. Newton, of Western.

Terrier Keeps U.S. Title At Westminster Show

New York, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Pendley Calling of Blarney, a wire-haired female fox terrier, tonight was awarded the grand championship of the Westminster Kennel Club's annual dog show.

The title equivalent to ruler of American dogdom—went for the second successive year to the English-bred animal owned by John G. Bates, of Morristown, N. J.

Eastern-Gonzaga Top School Program Today

Eastern, Tech and Western, of the high school group, and Landon, St. John's, Devitt, Georgetown Prep, Gonzaga, Woodward and Friends, of the prep school group, today are scheduled to produce as much basket ball as the local scholastics have put on in one day this year.

Interest congeals around the Eastern-Gonzaga game tonight at Gonzaga at 8 o'clock. Gonzaga trimmed Eastern, 35-34, early in the season in an extra period game, and tonight the joint holders of the high school title are out to balance the scales.

Tech and Western travel today, Tech meeting St. John's Freshmen at Annapolis and Western engaging Augusta Military Academy at Fort Defiance, Va.

In the other games today St. John's Cadets meet Landon at St. John's at 3 o'clock; Devitt plays host to Charlotte Hall; Woodward takes on Georgetown Prep at the Y. M. C. A., and Friends and the Episcopal B Squad mix matters at Friends.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

ONE would imagine that John Rieck would have to be carried from the scene after completing his upsidedown hanging record, but such is far from the case. Reick retains enough strength to loosen the ropes tied to his feet and lower himself to the floor. And that's not all—for this Indian can perform feats with his hair that would make the average person bald in 2 minutes. Right after his hanging record Reick allows two heavy men to hang from his hair, one on either side. Then, whirling himself round and round, he gradually lifts the men from the floor with his hair alone until they are almost horizontal. While hanging upsidedown Rieck entertains his friends by eating and drinking, which he is able to do by muscular control.

Cards Quintet Routed by Pennsylvania Collegians.

Special to The Washington Post.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Feb. 12.—The Catholic University Cardinals were no match for Geneva College here tonight, bowing by a margin of 42-19. Geneva jumped into the lead in the first quarter and completely baffled the Cardinals with their far superior passing and shooting, and at half time were leading, 32-11.

In the second half Geneva played with Fair, Manning and Montgomery on the bench, while Catholic U. made frequent substitutions, but were not able to rally the Cardinal cause. Manning was Geneva's star in this one-sided contest, scoring 14 points and being out of the game all but the last three minutes of the second half. Aultman shared scoring honors with Manning, playing the entire game.

Address by Schmeling To Legislature Vetoed

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 12 (A.P.).—A resolution inviting Max Schmeling, heavyweight boxing champion, to address the House when he appears in Columbia Monday threw the House into a brief argument today.

Moving that the resolution not be printed in the journal, Representative Sam Rittenberg, Charleston, said it would be "beneath the dignity of the House" to have Schmeling address it.

His motion carried overwhelmingly.

WHIRLWINDS IN VICTORY.

Eastern Whirlwind cagers, after holding their hosts to a 14-to-12 score at the half, weakened in the final half to allow the Army War College quintet to take the final verdict by a 43-to-24 count. The battle was staged in the War College gymnasium.

Cheers Drowned by Booes In Schmeling's Brief Show

MAX SCHMELING, champion heavyweight boxer of the world in some of these United States, put in an appearance at the Auditorium last night for the three-fold purpose of refereeing a rassle bout, receiving the customary boo which seems to be his peculiar gift from the American public, and issuing a statement—ably corroborated by the mouse-faced manager, Joseph Jacobs—to the effect that the butchers have a word which nicely sums up Jack Sharkey.

This was Schmeling's third stop on a tour which takes him and Jacobs to 47 cities east of the Mississippi, preparatory to "their" fight next June with Young Stribling.

Several Cheer Lustily.

Here and there among the 5,000 wrestling enthusiasts who witnessed Joe Turner's giant gymnasts go through five bouts, were several who cheered lustily for Schmeling, but cries of "We want Stribling" and "We want somebody else," possessed the greater volume and consistency.

Schmeling, as mild a mannered young man as was in the Auditorium last night, turned in a presentable job in supervising the semiwindup in which Tiny Roebuck took but 10 minutes to stun the veteran and barrel-bellied Jack Washburn into something resembling submission.

Jim McMillen, an important cog in the Curley rassle machine, disposed of Chief White Feather, the renowned mat sprinter, in 42 minutes in the best bout of the night. The big clean-limber former Illinois University grid captain finished off the Indian in a frenzy of football tackling and "taking out." To testify that the bout was strictly on the up and down the Chief remained in the ring afterward to nurse a bruised side for the edification of the cynics and the morbid-minded in the house.

Hagan Stars in Prelims.

George Hagen, the Marine grappler whose personality steals nearly every show he enters, put on the best show in the other three bouts. John Maxon, 204 pounds of frowning suet, was subdued in 25 minutes with an authentic-looking body slam and crotch hold.

The other two bouts were the ham variety. In the first, Dutch Green and Eddie Pope grimaced each other into a fifteen-minute draw, while in the other one Kirilenko defeated George Hill, substitute for Milo Steinborn, in nineteen minutes.

Mountaineers Use 3 Teams in Repeating Defeat of Hoyas.

Special to The Washington Post.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Feb. 12. West Virginia University's tired basket ball outfit returned to the home court tonight, after a series of four straight games in the East, and trimmed Georgetown University for the second time this week, winning handily tonight, 38-22. At Washington, D. C., on Monday night the Mountaineers beat the Hoyas, 36-29.

The Mountaineers took an early lead and were never threatened, having held a 19-11 edge at half time. Coach Francis Stadsvold used three full teams. When the Mountaineer regulars left the game after five minutes of the second half West Virginia had a 26-14 lead.

West Virginia Shows Five-Man Punch.

West Virginia showed the same five-man punch and the strong zone defensive which marked their 41-36 victory over the Navy yesterday afternoon.

Georgetown scored only three field goals in the second half, two of them coming in the last minute of play. Saturday night the Mountaineers will complete their most strenuous week of the season in a game with Penn State at State College, Pa.

Conger Accepts Bid To Run in C. U. Meet

Special to The Washington Post.

Philadelphia, Feb. 12.—Ray Conger, Illinois A. C. miler, who holds the American title and has won his only two starts this season, has accepted the invitation to compete in the second annual Catholic University indoor track meet at Washington, D. C., on March 7, Coach Dorsey Griffith, of the Cardinals, announced tonight at the Meadowbrook games, where Conger won the mile feature.

Other nationally known stars also have been invited to compete at the meet, Coach Griffith said.

Martin, Conger Win Specialties At Philadelphia

ARENA, Philadelphia, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Seraphin Martin, great French middle-distance runner, showed his class tonight in winning the Meadowbrook "880," international feature of the Meadowbrook games, from a fine field.

Making his second American appearance and his second race indoors, Martin loped to an easy 6-yard victory over Eddie Blake, of the Boston A. A. Dr. Paul Martin, the little Swiss surgeon, who burned up the indoor boards last winter, was sixth and last.

The time of 1:22.4 was not especially fast, but the manner in which Martin won was impressive. He jumped into the lead from his pole position and always had the race under control. He was looking back at the finish at the struggling Blake, who was coming up, but not fast enough.

Conger Sprints to Win After Loafing.

Ray Conger, loafed along in the J. W. Overton Memorial mile, and then had to sprint his hardest to defeat C. Coan, short-legged little University of Pennsylvania miler. The time was 4:17.6, good time for the slow track.

Gene Venzke, of New York, was third after setting the pace to the bell lap, where Conger and Coan went around him almost shoulder to shoulder. Suddenly seeming to realize he was in for a real foot race, Conger threw back his head, called on all that famous last lap "kick" and slowly drew away from Coan.

Stella Walsh, Cleveland girl, tied her own world's record at 40 yards in winning the sprint at 5.2 seconds. She was a step in front of Alice Monk, Newark, N. J., W. A. C.

Harvey Slight Choice Over Dundee Tonight

New York, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Len Harvey, slender, pale British middleweight, tackles Vince Dundee, wide-eyed Baltimore Italian, in a twelve-round return match at the Garden tomorrow night. The Englishman lost a twelve-round decision to Dundee in his American debut in the Garden after flooring the Italian twice in the first round.

Since withdrawal of recognition from Mickey Walker as the 160-pound champion, the New York Commission has been seeking a suitable successor and may elect to find him in the winner of tomorrow night's feature bout. Harvey is a slight favorite to put Dundee down again and keep him there this time.

St. Martin's Conquers Palace in D. C. League

The St. Martin's Team scored a well-earned 23-to-20 triumph over the Palace-District Grocery Stores quintet in a stubborn District of Columbia League contest played last night at the Boys' Club.

Clarke, of the Palmers, led both teams in scoring with three field goals and three fouls. Mealy played best for the Saints.

Everett, of Eastern, Second, as Record in Hurdles Falls.

C. U. Quartet Third; Mishap Figures in Defeat of G. U.

Special to The Washington Post.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—College and schoolboy track athletes from Washington, D. C., failed to break into the circle of winners at the annual Meadowbrook games tonight, but will carry back to the National Capital a grist of medals for minor places won.

Outstanding in their failures were the defeats of both the Georgetown University one-mile and two-mile teams in special relays, especially the two-mile event which marked the first time a Georgetown quintet has lost this race in four years. It was won by Penn, with Georgetown second.

The relay team of Catholic University could do no better than run third to Princeton and St. John's College, of Brooklyn, in a one-mile race, won in the time of 3:35 8-10.

Everett Second as Record Falls.

Washington's schoolboy athletes fared comparatively well. E. Everett, of Eastern High, pushed Herbert Tutilliver, of Hill School, to a new scholastic world record in the 45-yard hurdles in the time of 6 seconds flat, with R. Slye, a teammate, of Everett, finishing in fourth place. Everett was barely beaten by Tutilliver.

Al Reichman, star McKinley Tech half-miler, placed second in the scholastic event which was won by Pearson, of Mercersburg, in 2:03 4-10 seconds. The race was run in heats with the best times deciding the places. Reichman won his heat in 2:07 4-10; St. John, of Washington Central, finished second in his heat and took fourth place in the final placing.

Lynch, of Eastern High, finished second in the third heat of the mile run, but failed to place in the final, while Washington runners from Central and Eastern were far outdistanced in the 40-yard dash event that required seven heats.

Kelley Shut Out In Sprint.

Kelly, of Georgetown, who won a heat in the special invitation 40-yard event, was blotted out of the picture in the final, which was won by Ira Singer, of New York, with Bill Bruder, Newark, second, and Claude Bracey, the Texas College, third.

Kelly finished second to Tomasi, of New York A. C., in the 40-yard handicap event. Each runner had a 1-foot handicap and the winner was clocked in 4 7-10 seconds, the same time Kelly needed to win his heat, the seventh in eight of them.

Georgetown's 1-mile quartet might have shown to some advantage in the race against Penn and New York University but for a mishap. In this event Penn set a new record by traveling the distance in 3 minutes 27 8-10 seconds.

New York University was 15 yards behind Penn at the finish, with Georgetown a poor third because Arthur Briggs, running second for the Washington team, stumbled as he tried to take a turn in high gear and that cost plenty of distance. He was in second place when he hit the boards.

Healey's Spurt Wins Two Mile Relay.

In the two-mile relay, the National Capital boys put up a great race but Lawson Robertson's quartet of Penn half-milers proved too strong and Georgetown had to be content with second place. Penn State was third.

The most sensational racing of Jim Healy, Penn half-miler, won the 3-mile relay for the Red and Blue.

Healy was handed the baton 80 yards behind Johnny Mara, of Georgetown and 15 yards in back of Penn State's anchor runner. Wisely saving his strength for the last lap, Healy remained in third position until the turn approaching the back stretch when a spurt carried him to second position.

Then driving ahead he was only a yard in back of Mara at the beginning. Mara ran wide into the homestretch but Healy, by a clever strategic move, cut in and stole the pole. Then the pulsating sprint down the final straightaway, Healy won by a yard. He was timed for the half in 1:57.

Bernard Bonniwell, Philadelphia boy who competed in the high jump for Georgetown, could not show his stuff before home-town fans as he failed to place as Newkirk, Pa., with a 4-inch handicap, tossed 6 feet 2 inches to beat Harold Spitz, the national New Yorker, who broke the world's record last week. Spitz, from scratch, leaped 6 feet 4 inches.

Georgetown and Catholic U. Entered in Meet Tonight

The trackmen of Georgetown and Catholic U. return from Philadelphia today for only a few hours. They depart tonight for Morgantown, W. Va., to compete tomorrow night in the annual West Virginia University carnival. Georgetown's athletes scored sensationally in the West Virginia meet last year, winning two relay races and an individual event, and marks that shattered those existing for the meet.

MORE PUNCH, BETTER PITCHING NEEDED BY TIGERS

Rookies Hold Flag Hopes Of Harris

Signing of Grabowski Insures Formidable Catching Staff.

Uhle, Hoyt, Whitehill Nucleus of the 1931 Mound Corps.

DETROIT.

MANAGER—Stanley Harris. Coaches—Roger Bresnahan, Jean Dubuc.

INFIELDERS—Alexander, Koenig, Gehringer, Akers, McManus, *Owen, *Holley, *Schuble, *Dugan.

OUTFIELDERS — Roy Johnson, Funk, Stone, *Doljack, *Eckhardt, *Shiver, *G. Walker, *H. Walker.

*New men.

LIKE several other American League managers, Stanley Harris, of Detroit, is seeking more punch and better pitching. Detroit, until last season, always had the power but was shy on pitching. The pitching was somewhat improved in 1930, but the batting strength was decreased.

Apparently, Harris is of the opinion his hurling staff will deliver this year for he practically has stood pat as, outside of a few recalls, only one new thrower has been added, Marrow, of Beaumont, and he may need further minor league experience.

Uhle, Hoyt, Whitehill Nucleus Of Mound Staff.

It is expected that the three veterans, Uhle, Hoyt and Whitehill, will form the nucleus of the mound corps for this year and there is no reason to expect that any one of the three will fail to deliver. Of last year's crop of rookies, Hogsett, Wyatt, Cantrell and Bridges should show considerable improvement and be of real assistance.

A wise move has been made in the purchase of Catcher Grabowski, who caught for Chicago and New York for several seasons. The Tigers have not been any too well equipped behind the bat since the release of Johnny Bassler several years ago and Grabowski ought to steady the young pitchers. In Desautels Detroit has a clever youngster who is not any too effective with the stick.

The infield is expected to be composed of Alexander, Gehringer, Akers and McManus. Mark Koenig, who finished the 1930 season as a pitcher, may be given another shot at short, while Owen, a coast collegian who starred at short for Seattle, is likely to draw one of the utility berths with Holley, bought from Beaumont, understudying Gehringer at second.

Doljack Fine Hitter With Great Arm.

Batting strength may have been added to the outfield in the purchase of Eckhardt and Shiver from Beaumont, the Walker brothers from Evansville, and Doljack from Wheeling. Doljack was a real hitter in the minors, Eckhardt led the Texas League in hitting in 1930, while the two Walker boys not only batted emphatically in the Three-I circuit, but also performed sensationally upon the bases. Doljack is said to own a wonderful throwing arm. At least three of these rookies will give Roy Johnson, John Stone and Elias Funk spirited competition for the outfield berths.

Two famous veterans, Catcher Wally Schang and Third Baseman Joe Dugan, are to make the training trip with the Tigers. If they show they still can play major league ball, they will be signed.

On the whole, Detroit appears to be 10 or 15 per cent stronger than in 1930, the factors in this improvement being the acquisition of Catcher Grabowski, the expected development of three of last year's pitching rookies and added hitting power to the outfield.

Howard U. Quintet Beaten by Morgan

Morgan College basketers outclassed Howard University's tossers here last night, taking the contest by a 38-to-23 margin after leading from start to finish. The score at the half was 25 to 15. Saunders, Murdock and Conrad did the bulk of the scoring for the winners. In a preliminary the Brutes defeated the Spark Plugs, 31 to 19.

STRETCHRUN SCORES FOR GUN ROYAL

Beats Crossbones in Miami Sprint by 1½ Lengths.

HIALEAH RACE TRACK, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—M. Stern's consistent old horse, Gun Royal, scored an impressive victory in the Lincoln Claiming Handicap, 6-furlong feature of a well-balanced card here today.

He took up 120 pounds and under Charlie Kurtsinger's hustling ride easily led E. B. McLean's Crossbones to the finish with G. D. Widener's Scatter third.

Okaybee was fourth.

Flagbearer and Okaybee got away fast and set a fast pace in the first furlong in an effort to open up a safe lead. The result was that both tired badly when the real racing began.

In the stretch Gun Royal took the lead and drew away in the final sixteenth, winning easily by one and a half lengths over the McLean colorbearer.

The winner paid $6.50. The time was 1:11 1-5.

J. C. C. to Enter Six Teams In Post Basket Ball Tourney

Center Fives, Under McNamara, Long Prominent.

JIM McNAMARA.

NO less than six crack teams will carry the colors of the Jewish Community Center into The Post's 1931 A. A. U. Basket Ball Tournament, according to an announcement made last night by Jim MacNamara, director of athletics and head coach of basket ball at the center. The tournament will start March 9, and, as usual, will be staged at the Tech High School Gym.

The center will be represented in the 100, 115, 130, 145, and unlimited boys' and men's classes, and in the unlimited girls' division. Last year, it sent quintets into the tournament in every class except the 115 and the 145 boys and the girls junior section.

100-Pounders Reached Semifinals.

The 100-pound team, in the 1930 tournament, went to the finals before being eliminated by the Boys Club Optimists. The 130-pound outfit got as far as the semifinals before being spilled by the St. John's team, which later won the section title. The unlimited quintet captured its first two games and then bowed to the Montrose Five, eventual champions of that class, and the girls team also got to the finals only to lose out to the Eagles by a close score.

All of which goes to show the caliber of the various teams which usually represent the center. Similarly, the Jewish Community Center has achieved almost equally fine success in other tournaments several times.

McNamara has more than 120 boys playing basket ball at the center, and from this material his teams will be chosen. Forty girls also are participating in the sport under the direction of Miss Catherine Dickinson, well-known local player.

Due to the heavy demand for registration blanks among the 130, 115 and 100 pound boys' teams, and girls' junior outfits, The Post has been forced to secure several hundred more of these sheets. The players in these classes have until February 27 to register, which also is the date team entry blanks must be submitted.

Registration blanks can be returned either to William E. Russell, chairman of registration, at 1503 North Capitol street, or to the sports department of The Post.

HITTING the HEAD PIN

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 12.—Washington bowlers were defeated in the two matches in which they participated here tonight.

In a single engagement Max Rosenberg, Northeast Temple captain, was conquered by Ed Blakeney, 634 to 549. The Baltimorean emerged victorious in each of the five games rolled.

Eddie Espey and Paul Harrison, of the National Player Drys, lost a doubles contest. George Lang and Eli Pickus rolled the first four games, while Blakeney replaced Pickus in the fifth game. The score was 1,159 to 1,128. The Baltimoreans were 58 pins behind when the last game started, but Blakeney came through with 154, the highest score of the battle, and Lang netted 134, while Espey was getting 104 and Harrison only 95.

After capturing the first battle, 612 to 577, the King Pins weakened to allow the Lucky Strikes to win the next two encounters, 629 to 586, and 551 to 531, in their National Capital League match last night at Lucky Strike. The King Pins, despite their loss, still retain their first place position in the league standings.

"Chief" Lovett, of the winning quintet, crashed out a 395 set which was high for the match. His games were 146, 128 and 122. Glenn Wolstenholme topped the King Pins with a 154 game, and a 386 set.

Half of the War Department League matches rolled last night at the Arcadia, resulted in clean sweeps, when the Howitzers, Hydrographics, Frankles and Transportation, whitewashed War College, Panama Canal No. 2, Engineers and Construction, respectively. In the other league matches, Panama Canal No. 1 took the odd contest from Statistics, Barbettes did the same to Adjutants, Finance bowed twice to Auditors, and Fort Humphrey scored a 2-to-1 triumph over Officers.

Two more season's records went by the boards last night at Columbia as the Interior Department League rollers continued the sensational performances which have marked their duckpin endeavors of late.

Tanner Eisenstein, of Pension, hung up a new game mark with a 149 total, which was prominent in the two-game triumph his team, the Pensions, scored over Lithographs. Eisenstein made his first mark in the seventh box and followed with triple-header strike. The second new record was turned in by the Secretary quintet which turned in games of 526, 576 and 562, for a 1,664 team set. The Secs were assisted immeasurably by Flannery, who totaled a 391 set. Flannery's games were 112, 148 and 131.

Land whitewashed Indian, and Reclamation did the same to Survey, in the other league matches.

Lehigh captured two games from Navy, Dartmouth scored a double triumph over V. P. I., Brown took the measure of Cornell in two contests, Maryland did the same to Princeton, and V. M. I. walked away with the odd battle from Yale in the Intercollegiate League matches last night on the Rendezvous drives.

Commerce Comets whitewashed Census, and Treasury did the same to Commerce Juniors in the feature Ladies' Federal League matches last night on the Arcadia drives. Interstate walloped Navy twice, and General Accounting captured two out of three from Veterans' Bureau in the other league matches. Lorraine Gulli, of Navy, shot the highest individual set of the night, a 323 effort.

The American Legion duckpin tournament will get under way tomorrow night at the Arcadia, starting at 7 o'clock. The affair is open to all ex-service men. An entrance fee of $2 will be charged, which includes games.

Lee D. Butler rollers defeated the Semmes Motor Co. in the outstanding battle of the Automotive League last night at Lucky Strike. Stanley Horner captured two from Steuart Motors, and L. P. Steuart did the same to Emerson & Orme in the other league matches. Neumeyer and Buick received three-game forfeits from Barry-Pate and Cadillac, respectively.

Two more season's records went by the boards last night at Columbia as the Interior Department rollers continued the brilliant performances which have marked their duckpin endeavors of late.

Lo Ko Service and Rex, by taking three games from Fox Theater and Cubs, respectively, last night at the Recreation Alleys, maintained their positions as leaders in the Recreation League. Italian All-Stars also scored a clean sweep over Stantons, while Patent Office took two games from Dodgers and Pops did the same to Commonwealths.

Outstanding performances were turned in by Beavers, of Rex, who registered a 392 set, which was high for the night; Rose, of the All-Stars, with a 374 set; Overend, of Rex, and Mayo, of Cubs, with 358; Tyler, of Dodgers, with 351; Reiness, of Lo Ko Service, with 363, and Pantos, of Lo Ko Service, with 339.

Bradford's 345 set featured the two-to one victory Income scored over Recapture in an Interstate Commerce Commission League match last night at Columbia. Depreciation took all three from Reproduction, and Appreciation captured the odd contest from Valuation in the other league matches.

Accounts walloped Question Marks in two games, Authorities did the same to Brownies, and All-Stars defeated Progressives in two games, in a trio of Ladies' Public Debt League matches staged last night at Lucky Strike. Mrs. Ella Limerick, of Authorities, shot a 308 set, and Mrs. Eva Griffis, of Accounts, collected a 116 game, both of which were high for the night.

Boots and Saddles

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

—Miami Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS

A PROGRAM composed of five claiming events for the cheapest grade of platers, an all-allowance affair, the Brookdale Purse, will support the Grasslands Claiming Handicap, the feature, at Hialeah Park today.

FEATURE RACE—WHISP, from the O. Torrell Stable, was overmatched in his start and appears to hold the edge against this small field. JEAN LAFITTE from the Keenland Stud, has shown improvement in recent races and is selected to furnish the opposition. LAHOR should hold SEARCHER safe for the minor honors.

FIRST RACE — SNOW CLOUD showed a high turn of speed to finish second to Grand Duchess in his last outing, and figures to graduate from this field of maiden colts and geldings. WATTAHORSE is well suited by the conditions and is given the place call. WESTKO is the show possibility.

SECOND EVENT—DOVE, a highly regarded youngster from the J. E. Gaffney string and winner of her three starts at this track, appears a standout, not only in this field, but the entire card as well. The daughter of Noah—Millifleurs is nicely weighted with 111 pounds, and should leap from the drop of the flag. CHINKEE has turned in some clever performances and should force the pace. SIBERIA, from the G. D. Widener Stable, is selected for the show award.

THIRD RACE—TANTALIZING is a consistent gelding and on his previous impressive victory is accorded the choice. GAY BIRD, from the A. W. Abbot barn, raced well over a heavy track last start, but should show enough speed to have the place in this field. LAUGHING BOY appears best of the others and is given the show call.

FOURTH RACE—CLEAN PLAY, from the Duncan stable, gained a clean-cut victory in his first start since the Bowie meeting and off that brilliant effort is selected to take down the major share of the purse. GRACIOUS GIFT finished second in two previous attempts and should go as well here. GUIDE RIGHT figures to get into the money.

SIXTH RACE—VEST, a recent winner, gets the call against this field. The Carreaud mare stepped the mile distance in 1:38 3-5 to win handily and figures to duplicate in meeting the same class. PRINCE TOKALON finished third in his last start. BROWN TRAP showed a return to form last out and may prove troublesome.

SEVENTH RACE—PHANTOM CLOUD has reached his best form and on recent efforts should lead this field to the wire. TALENTED PRINCE was beaten a nose by PHANTOM CLOUD the other day and with the conditions identical, they should finish in that order. SIS LARGO appears best of the others.

EAGLES BOW TO CARNEGIE FIVE, 31-21

Special to The Washington Post.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 12.—In a game lacking in thrills Carnegie Tech defeated the American University five 31-21. The only real basket ball played was played in the first three minutes. The home team took an early lead and was never threatened throughout the entire game by the Eagles.

With six minutes to play in the first half a new Carnegie team came on the floor and during the balance of that period the spectators were given a show of burlesque basket ball. During those minutes only 2 points were scored by the teams.

American University, during the last minutes, rallied, with field goals by Sells and Dick. Woods dropped in two fouls to put the Washingtonians within 6 points of tying the score, but Stents and Leonard made field goals for Carnegie and the game soon ended.

SAYS PEGLER

The collie yelled to Joe to help him out handling the hound.

"What did he do to you?" Joe asked.

COLLIE LIES LIKE GOOD WITNESS

"Why," the collie said, lying like a witness for a street car company in a damage suit, "why, I was sitting over there batting myself on the ear to dislodge a flea when this mutt came tearing over and the first thing I knew he was on me from behind and had his teeth in my throat. I had a terrible time fighting him off, and then he said he was mistaken because he was looking for you all the time, and he called you a dirty so-and-so. Oh, the names that bum was calling you, Joe."

Joe is short-tempered and he had something against the hound anyway, besides which the collie was his pal, so he made one jump and down went the hound, which rolled loose, however, and started to fight. At that the collie's gumption came up and he sailed in, yelling, "Let me at him, pal!" But they seem to have some kind of national boundary. The hound lives across the road and when he found himself outnumbered he got behind his own property line and came to a stand, snarling insults.

Joe stopped at the line and addressed himself to the hound, but he seemed to respect some diplomatic barrier at this point and went no farther. Anyway, a couple of children had come out of the hound's house and were soothing him, now and throwing chunks of ice at Joe. Of course, Joe could have torn them apart, but he was aware of some rules and immunities, so, in his own language, he addressed some evil remarks to the hound, kicked up some pebbles himself and jogged off home.

Mr. Schilling came down the steps of the grocery store and gave the collie a slap alongside the head with the ladle. Then he spoke to Joe.

"Listen, Joe," he said. "You've got that hound all wrong. He's a right guy. Minds his own business. Treed about fifteen 'possum this year and his old man is out of work and he gets six bucks a hide from Sears-Roebuck. Lay off that hound, Joe. That collie is a gold brick, anyway."

Joe wriggled all over, gobbled some remarks in his throat and let go three or four loud, laughing barks. "Well, he was licking my pal," Joe said, if I understand his language. "He may be no good; he may be a phoney, but I take them as I find them and he's always been a pal with me, and any dog that licks my pal has got to lick Joe."

New Plan Is Given By Radiator Firm

National Corporation May Reorganize on Lines Recommended.

New York, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—A plan for reorganization of National Radiator Corporation was announced today. The reorganization committee, making public the proposal, mentioned the advisability of conserving the corporation's cash resources by omitting the February interest payment on the outstanding debenture bonds and by reducing fixed charges, permitting the use of liquid assets in the current conduct of business.

The plan provides for a 50 per cent reduction in the funded debt by an exchange of $10,716,000 of 6½ per cent debenture bonds for $5,358,000 of 15-year 5 per cent debentures. Holders of the present bonds would receive for each $1,000 principal amount a $500 new bond, five shares of new preferred stock and twenty shares of new common stock. Preferred stockholders would get one share of the new common, and owners of the present common would be entitled to receive a warrant for the purchase of one new share at $20 for every three now held. It is proposed to make interest on the new debentures cumulative, but payable only out of net earnings.

Standard Oil Reduces Gas 2 Cents in Chicago

Chicago, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—The Standard Oil Co. of Indiana today announced a reduction of 2 cents a gallon in the retail and wholesale price of gasoline in the Chicago area to go into effect tomorrow.

The new prices will be 15 cents at service stations and 12 cents from tank wagons, both including the State 3-cent tax. The cut was made, the company announced, to meet competitive conditions.

25,000 CELEBRATE FORMAL OPENING OF WHOLESALE MARKET

Fireworks, Bands, Confetti Add Color to Long-Anticipated Event.

MRS. WILEY PRAISES CHOICE OF LOCATION

P. R. R. Officer Is Among Speakers at Exercises in Water Street.

Washington's new wholesale market district, anticipated in a poll conducted by The Post more than four years ago, was formally thrown open to the public last night at a gay celebration, arranged by the 70 or more dealers who have stands in the area.

A throng estimated at 25,000 persons milled through Water street and highways intersecting from Eleventh to Fourteenth blocked off for the fete. From an open stage Commissioner Crosby and others addressed the crowds. The addresses were radiocast.

Orchestras stationed at vantage points, the Pennsylvania Band and the Washington Boys Independent Band, confetti distributed everywhere by the dealers and an hour's fireworks display added color to the festival.

Name Winner Gets $100.

Opening the exercises, Commissioner Crosby presented a $100 check to Walter C. White, whose name, "The Potomac Food Distributors Association," was adopted by the organized dealers.

In his remarks he declared the site the logical place for the wholesale dealers, and predicted the day is not far distant when adjacent land will be cleared for a farmers' market. He said the economical concentration of dealers at that point may even tend to hold down the level of food prices here.

Gen. Crosby was introduced by J. T. Richardson, president of the dealers, who also presented Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, widow of the famous food authority; Representative Gale H. Stalker (Republican), New York, "legislative father" of the farmers' market, and C. S. Krick, a vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which has substantial investments in the new market district.

"I feel that the opening of this market is the realization of a dream," said Mrs. Wiley.

"Inquiry soon revealed the fact that both by the law of economy and the acts of Congress, the Southwest site was the fittest in our city for our great food distribution area."

She pointed out that Potomac yards, receiving point for more than 77 per cent of Washington's food supply, was only 4 miles distant; that water, railroad and refrigeration facilities make the location economically an "ideal" one.

Predicts Market.

Mr. Stalker said the farmers' market "is coming to Southwest Washington as soon as a few minor technicalities are overcome."

"The market will be located in the two squares east of here," he said. "Congress has passed this legislation and appropriated the money for the project."

He said a study of the market situation has convinced him the Southwest location "will result in a tremendous saving in prices, because there can be no monopoly here." The new plant, he said, should be able to serve the people of Washington "efficiently, economically and in the most satisfactory manner."

Mr. Krick told of the Pennsylvania Railroad's participation in the Southwest market movement. He said the Pennsylvania has invested, in the last five years, $22,000,000 in perishable produce terminal facilities in various cities.

"We are confident that these new facilities will not only be beneficial to the particular enterprises in which you are engaged, and to your immediate patrons, but with the passing of time will gain constantly wider recognition as an outstanding improvement in the entire city as well.

"Such anticipation rests in no small degree upon the exceptionally favorable location."

Woman Faints in Crowd.

In the crush of the crowd near Twelfth and Water streets, Mrs. Jennie Bloom, 32 years old, of 606 North Carolina avenue, fainted. She received first aid from Dr. Eastlake, who responded in an Emergency Hospital ambulance. She was taken to the hospital for further treatment.

The fireworks display was visible throughout the city. Crowds leaving downtown theaters gathered on Thirteenth street and at other points to watch the skies.

Salvatore Scalco, veteran campaigner for the Southwest market site, and a member of the committee in charge of arrangements, distributed red carnations among those on the speakers' platform at 1223 Water street. The program from the stage was interspersed with selections by the Keystone Quartet and the Pennsylvania Railroad Orchestra.

Child Hit by Car, Injured.

Walking into an auto as he was crossing the street, 5-year-old Henry Hollis, of 115 D street southeast, was knocked down and suffered concussion of the brain yesterday. The accident occurred at Second street and North Carolina avenue southeast. He was taken to Providence Hospital by the driver, Elizabeth A. Coon, Fourth street near G street southeast. She was not held by police.

Life of the Blaine real estate subcommittee, investigating real estate and securities matters in the District, was formally extended by the Senate yesterday.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S FOOD NEEDS STUDIED

Dr. Ballou Orders Survey Following Conference With Inspector.

COPELAND AIDS MOVE

Food needs of undernourished and underprivileged children in the public school system will be determined by a survey ordered yesterday by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools. This action was taken following a conference with Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, medical inspector, and a meeting yesterday afternoon with officers of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations.

The parent-teacher organizations are capable of meeting any needs in this direction, Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter, member of the board of the congress, declared yesterday, but Dr. Ballou refrained from expressing an opinion pending complication of facts uncovered by the survey.

Senator Gives More Impetus.

The matter of providing lunches for school children who are undernourished and lack funds to buy lunches was given impetus Wednesday when Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, suggested that a study be made by the health department and the school board to determine what steps might be taken to provide food for poor children. His suggestion followed testimony by John S. Noonan to the effect that a large number of children were attending school without proper nourishment.

Dr. Ballou advised the school board a week ago that needy children were receiving milk and cracker lunches at present despite inability to pay the daily fee through the generosity of parent-teacher associations and teachers in schools where the need arises.

Favors Central Arrangement.

The superintendent explained yesterday that it was his belief that if figures prove a considerable need for aid to poor children that some central arrangement could be made by which parent-teacher associations throughout the District and school officers and teachers of the whole system would share the expense.

He said he felt it unfair to permit teachers who happened to be assigned to schools attended by poorer children and parent-teacher associations of those particular schools to carry the entire burden.

Health Officer William C. Fowler said yesterday that he had conferred with Dr. J. A. Murphy, chief medical inspector of the school system, and had instructed him to study the situation to determine what might be done in the way of obtaining data on underfed school children.

Dr. Fowler said that he had received no formal instructions concerning the survey, however, and that until he did he would not make the investigation.

Man Trails Thief, Sees New Holdup

Coming by chance upon the Negro who on Tuesday night hired his cab and then robbed him of $3 on Corcoran street near Fifteenth street, Alvin W. Jenkins, cab driver, of 1408 Girard street northwest, decided to shadow the man in the hope that he would meet a policeman. Jenkins trailed his man to Fifteenth and Corcoran streets northwest and there, before his startled eyes, the Negro hailed another cab, and repeated the holdup he had perpetrated upon Jenkins. The latter, not to be outdone, continued to shadow the Negro, but he lost him in the maze of Logan Circle.

Allen Sousa, 28 years old, of 315 Seaton place northeast, is the taxicab driver who was robbed by the Negro while Jenkins was trailing him. Sousa reported to the Second Precinct that he had been relieved of $7.

FIRM'S CREDITORS PLANNING MEETING

Bankruptcy Referee Is Seeking Room Large Enough for Claimants.

COURT ACTION DELAYED

Fred J. Eden, referee in bankruptcy, yesterday arranged with United States Marshal Edgar C. Snyder, custodian of the District Supreme Court Building, for a special courtroom in which to hold the first meeting of the creditors of the bankrupt investment house of Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co.

"There are so many, so I understand, that I can not accomodate them in my offices in the Wilkins Building," Mr. Eden said, when questioned.

The meeting will be open, but it was understood that only creditors or note holders and their attorneys would be admitted.

The only other development came yesterday when Justice Jesse C. Adkins in his division of District Supreme Court, continued until March 5 all rules to show cause which have been issued since the bankruptcy petition was filed. Approximately 60 attorneys were on hand when the case was called. Most of them represent note holders.

As yet the schedule of the bankrupt firm has not been filed. Through special dispensation of the court the company has until February 25 to file its schedule. It is expected that the schedule will be filed before then, and ten days later Mr. Eden will hold the creditors' meeting.

District Official's Car Is Damaged in Collision

Slight damage was done to the limousine of Commissioner Luther H. Reichelderfer last night when a smaller car, attempting to rectify the error of going the wrong direction on a one-way street, backed into it. Ulysses Weaver, Negro chauffeur, was alone in the Commissioner's car at the time.

The mishap occurred on E street near Thirteenth. At the wheel of the other machine was Miss Lillian Wilse, Georgia avenue near Dahlia street northwest. Her passengers were three young women, Misses L. Richards, W. A. Grimm and A. C. Emory, who gave the British Embassy as their address.

$18 in Cosmetics Reported Stolen.

George Bolchert, manager of Emile & Co., 1221 Connecticut avenue northwest, yesterday reported theft of perfume, lipsticks and other cosmetics valued at $18 from the second floor of that address. He said thieves had jimmied a door and ransacked the place.

Aged Man Takes Life With Razor

W. K. Young, 69, Found on Bathroom Floor With Wrist Slashed.

William K. Young, 69 years old, committed suicide yesterday by slashing his left wrist with a razor blade in the bathroom of his home on Sixth street near M street northwest, according to a death certificate issued by Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt.

The man was found lying on the bathroom floor by Madison L. Paskel, a roomer in the house, who summoned police. He was alive when found, but was later pronounced dead by Emergency Hospital doctors.

Coroner Nevitt found a razor blade underneath his body. Relatives said that the man had been suffering of heart disease and was to be taken to the hospital yesterday for treatment. His wife, Mrs. Margaret M. Young, lives at Norwood, Md.

Property Damage Solved As Dead Squirrel Is Found

A squirrel, were it still alive, would be confined at the Fourteenth Precinct Station charged with the depredation of private property, according to police.

W. C. and A. N. Miller, owners of a vacant building in Webster street, complained to police that "some one" had entered the building, scratched the newly finished woodwork and plastered walls and otherwise ruined the appearance of the interior. An investigation was started.

Yesterday Capt. Charles H. Bromarman and Private L. D. Johnson were looking over the premises and chanced to go into the basement. There, stretched out in a corner, was a small gray squirrel, its claws broken from trying to climb slick walls and its mouth smeared with blood coming from bruises suffered when it had desperately endeavored to chew its way through thick walls.

Police say the squirrel fell into the house through the chimney and that after days of trying to escape from the accidental prison it had died from starvation. But opposite the entry of the complaint in the station log will be placed the explanation: "Damage done by squirrel. Squirrel dead."

GRAND JURY ENDS LIMERICK INQUIRY

FOUR ARE BEING HELD

The grand jury investigation of the death of Beulah Limerick ended yesterday, with indications that there would be no indictment.

All the bother which has been caused by the recent receipt of a letter by William Limerick, brother of the slain girl, meant nothing at all, it was understood.

Assistant United States Attorney Julian I. Richards, who conducted the presentation, stated that the grand jury would make a report next Tuesday unless the police found new evidence.

The investigation has been under way for several weeks, but lagged after the grand jury had repeatedly questioned the girl's family and several other witnesses. It was understood that the four suspects now held in jail might be released before the grand jury's formal report.

Those held are Patrolman Robert F. Langdon, Vernon Limerick, a brother of the girl; Richard Reed and William E. Paddy. All were ordered held for grand jury action by the coroner's jury.

Instead of returning an indictment the grand jury is expected to make a recommendation that hospital regulations be changed so that internes or physicians answering emergency calls where death is evident remain at the scene until the coroner arrives.

Boy Robs Filling Station Till of $6 and Escapes

A boy yesterday morning succeeded in getting away with about $6 which he took from the cash register of a filling station at Wisconsin avenue and Q street northwest while the manager of the station, Roy R. Roatenburg, was waiting on a customer.

According to the story told police by Roatenburg, the boy walked into the station while he was servicing a car in the far corner of the station grounds. Mr. Roatenburg heard the cash register ring and looked up to see the boy running up the street. He was described as wearing a khaki mackinaw and short pants. Police immediately broadcast a lookout over the radio and an investigation is being carried on by Seventh Precinct detectives.

SEARCH FOR 2 MEN WHO ROBBED MAIL TRUCK UNAVAILING

$800,000 IN MUTILATED CURRENCY WAS STOLEN

Efforts to Trace Black Auto Fail; Clerk Felled by Outlaw Pair.

No trace has been found of the mail bandits who early yesterday held up two postal employes in the Union Station and escaped with $800,000 in mutilated currency which was under shipment to the Treasury Department from the Federal Reserve Bank in New York.

All day postoffice operatives, secret service men and Washington detectives made a fruitless attempt to trace the black car which sped from the Union Station a few minutes after the holdup.

The thugs who bludgeoned Peter Johnson, of Belleville, N. J., a railway mail clerk, escaped with the currency, which is valueless to them. If the currency had been whole, it would have been worth $807,000, but it had been cut in half and the portions shipped separately. Now the Treasury has half of the notes and the bandits the other half.

Arrived at 2 A. M.

The three pouches of registered mail arrived about 2 a. m. at the Union Station and Johnson was convoying them on a truck to the postoffice when he was set upon by the bandits in the concourse of the station.

"I was walking behind the mail truck," Johnson said, "and I couldn't see in front because the pouches were piled too high.

"Out of the corner of my eye I saw two men walking toward an opening in the railway station fence. They didn't seem to hurry. They just sauntered along. I thought they were mail clerks going to work.

"All of a sudden they turned and rushed me. They were swinging what looked like lead pipes. I was too surprised to pull my gun. I backed away. I yelled for help and threw up my arms to protect my head. One of them hit me on the head. That's the last I remember."

Heard Cry for Help.

Jesse B. Swygert, a colored postal employe, of 119 Massachusetts avenue, who was pulling the mail truck, heard Johnson's cry for help. He saw the glint of the weapons in the bandits' hands and he dodged behind the truck and ran for help.

The bandits grabbed three mail pouches and ran toward the west entrance to the station, where they entered a car and drove away. Swygert said another man was at the wheel. Soon after the robbery, August E. Powell, of 116 Fourth street northeast, a taxicab driver, saw a car speed up North Capitol street. He did not obtain the license number.

When officers reached Johnson he told them that he had just regained consciousness. He was unable to say whether he had been struck on the head or had fallen to the pavement in the excitement. Neither Swygert nor Johnson could say whether pistols had been used. Johnson was treated by a Casualty Hospital physician for scalp abrasions.

Believe Four Men Involved.

Postal Inspector W. F. Chester and Inspector L. A. De Waard, said that there is no reason to believe that the men bandits had inside knowledge of the shipment, although they were apparently waiting for mail from that particular train.

Investigators leaned to the theory that four men were involved. They found three sections of lead pipe near the robbery scene. Each of the sacks weighed 72 pounds, and the inspectors believe that three men carried them away while a fourth remained in the car.

Immediately after the robberey a radio alarm was broadcast for the car but cruisers and scout cars, manned by policemen, failed to find any trace of the men.

Marble Reported Stolen.

Nathan Frank, of 315 L street southwest, reported yesterday to police that 21 pieces of marble, in slabs 4 feet square and 1 inch thick, were stolen from a side yard at that address during the past week. The marble was valued at $20.

Mr. Tranghese says he has no superior in the merry sport of rolling a loaded ash can between two given points. Mr. Tranghese offers to meet all comers in a contest over any distance.

• • • •

"This Tranghese is an impostor," declared Elmer Twitchell, in a letter to the State Athletic Commission today. "I am the champion ash can roller of America and the world. My title has been uncontested for years.

• • • •

"I won the ash can rolling titular honors in 1910," continues the letter, "and I have the International Ash Can Rolling Trophy, a handsome 22-inch whiskbroom with a solid gold handle. On the handle is my likeness engraved with an inscription, 'Elmer Twitchell, the Ash Can King.'

• • • •

"This is the first time I have boasted of the matter. I do not consider ash can rolling my major purpose in life, nor do I think it the ideal sport. The fact is that I got into it by accident. I was living at the time in an apartment over an alley where the janitor put out the ash can for the city ashmen to empty each morning. Well, you know how I suffered. The average ash can roller does not think he is getting real satisfaction out of his job unless he drags the can down the alley with great gusto and then, after emptying it, bounces it all over the place, waking everybody in the neighborhood up.

• • • •

"I STOOD this as long as I could until one morning I leaped out the window, berated the ashmen and undertook to show them how to roll an ash can to an ash wagon and back in a refined and orderly manner. To my surprise, I discovered that I was a natural born ash can roller.

• • • •

"Yes, sir, I knew at once that I had been given that elusive thing known as ash can rolling genius. I found I had speed, rhythm, control and the mysterious quality known as touch. To be brief, I decided to take it up in a serious way.

• • • •

"Once I had attained complete mastery of the ash can and whipped myself into perfect physical condition, I entered the Amateur Open Ash Can Rolling Tournament and Rubbish Dumping Carnival at Barren Island in May, 1909. I won easily against the pick of America's rubbish men.

• • • •

"I was then disqualified as an amateur as a result of the roller-writer rule and turned pro. In August, 1910, I entered the International Professional Ash Can Rolling Classic against rollers from all over the world and was never even pressed.

• • • •

ADD VANISHING AMERICANS.

THE fellow who would saw wood for something to eat.

The butcher who would throw in something for the dog and cat.

The lawyer who was pretty fussy about ethics.

The waiter who could take a 25-cent tip without growling.

Well, Gen. Butler will not be court-martialed, and Secretary Adams of the Navy is being congratulated heartily on his escape.

The general's future engagements in time of peace will be advertised as "Positively Without Sound."

They now describe certain hot-headed belligerents in the United States Senate as men who are "quick on the telephone."

Child's Quick Action Saves Life of Youth

Agile Younger Brother Halts Boy, 11, In Suicide Try.

Quick thinking and prompt action on the part of an 8-year-old brother yesterday saved the life of John Martin Tucker, 11 years old, of B street, near Eighth street southeast, when, police say, he attempted suicide by inhaling gas shortly after 9 yesterday morning.

The act, police say, was prompted by a dread of appearing in Juvenile Court this morning on a charge of incorrigibility, coupled with a desire to find whether the new natural gas, which John had heard about recently, would kill a person.

The younger brother, Russell, came into the house shortly after John had turned the gas jet on, and when he smelled it he immediately suspicioned the act and ran to the Wallach School, where both boys are students, and which is only a block from their home, notifying John's teacher of what was happening.

The teacher in turn notified the principal of the school, Miss E. M. Cook, who called police and the Fire Rescue Squad. Police came to the school immediately and had Russell show them to the home, where they broke in and pulled the youth out of the gas-filled room and turned off the jet.

The Rescue Squad, under the leadership of Lieut. A. C. Keefer, administered first-aid treatment at the home, and Dr. Lyman Greene, from Casualty Hospital, took the boy to the institution, where he was given further treatment before being removed to Gallinger Hospital and placed under mental observation.

John, auburn-haired and with clear blue eyes which give him an exceptionally intelligent appearance for a young boy, told hospital attaches that "I knew the gas would kill me, but I didn't care." Further than that, and with the Juvenile Court fear, he would not discuss the incident. Doctors say they think he may have been "experimenting" with the gas, using his life as experimenting material.

He is the son of James O. Tucker, who is employed in the District sewage department. His mother has been dead several years. The father and his two sons live alone.

Police say that John once before attempted suicide by inhaling the gas fumes, the first attempt being made last summer. This time the act was foiled by a member of his family, also, who appeared on the scene in time to cut the gas off and revive him.

DESIGN IS APPROVED FOR U.S. WAREHOUSE

BRIDGE ITEM CONSIDERED

The design for the Federal warehouse which will be built below the Mall and south of the railroad tracks between C and D and Seventh and Eighth streets southwest was approved yesterday by the Commission of Fine Arts. Congress has appropriated $1,700,000 for the project.

Architectural plans specify that the structure will be seven stories in height, 498 feet long and 214 feet in width. One of its outstanding features will be a driveway running underneath the entire building.

Approval also was given by the commission to the design for a hydraulic laboratory which will be constructed on the south slope of the Bureau of Standards grounds, facing Tilden street. Dr. George K. Burgess, director of the bureau, submitted the design through W. J. Deming, architect.

The commissioners conferred with Frederick H. Brooke, architect, relative to the World War memorial bandstand which will be erected in Potomac Park on the south side of the reflecting pool. It is proposed to have the stand, which will be of marble, completed in time for the Washington bicentennial celebration next year.

The pylons at the Virginia end of the Arlington Memorial Bridge were approved as a type of design to mark highway entrances into the District, a project sponsored by the Garden Club of America.

Plans for the Gen. Artemus Ward statue and the Jane A. Delano memorial, which will be erected on the grounds at National Red Cross headquarters, also were discussed.

Lawyer Is Acquitted Of Assault Charge

Harry Kennedy, local attorney, was acquitted by a police court jury before Judge Gus R. Schuldt yesterday on a charge of assaulting Gus C. Chinn, a photographer for the Evening Star.

The jury was out about two hours, and its verdict followed action of the judge in holding that privacy was not violated when a photographer sought to take a person's picture. Attorney Harry I. Quinn appeared for Kennedy.

The trial was the second that has been held in the case, both being conducted by Assistant United States Attorney Michael F. Keough.

JUSTICE SCORES LAX SYSTEM OF BONDING

Witness Unable to Identify Signature of Man Held in Glassman Case.

NO EXPLANATION GIVEN

A change in the bonding method in Washington is needed, Justice Oscar R. Luhring declared yesterday in District Supreme Court, during the trial of Herbert Glassman and ten alleged confederates on charges of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act.

The question was raised during the examination of Milton S. Kronheim, a professional bondsman, who went surety for Samuel Goldstein, one of the defendants. Mr. Kronheim was asked to identify Goldstein's signature, but said he could not. Justice Luhring asked from the bench:

"Did you sign that bond?"

Mr. Kronheim admitted that he did.

"Well, how does it happen," asked the court, "that you can not identify the signature of the man who is supposed to have sighed the bond simultaneously with you?"

Mr. Kronheim was unable to explain, and the judge then asserted that something should be done about the bonding situation in Washington.

Mr. Kronheim testified just after United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage had taken the stand, and had picked out Herbert Glassman as Goldstein. It was then that the Government sent out for Mr. Kronheim.

Mr. Turnage, like Mr. Kronheim, was asked to identify his signature, the signature of the defendant and to personally identify the man.

Mr. Turnage was the second United States commissioner to testify. The other one was J. Frank Supplee, who identified a bond alleged to have been signed before him by one of the defendants.

Most of the testimony during the day related to checks, bank officials being the witnesses.

Favorable Report Made On Judge Nathan Cayton

Reappointment of Judge Nathan Cayton, of the Municipal Court of the District, was favorably reported to the Senate yesterday by Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, member of the subcommittee which considered the reappointment of the judge.

One or two persons, angered by the result of actions in Judge Cayton's court, protested against his reappointment, but these objections were not considered sufficient.

Boy Tells of Safe Escape From Grasp of Kidnaper

None the worse for his experience, William Hoy, 13-year-old newsboy, of 2207 I street northwest, returned to his home early last night, after having effected his own rescue from a room in which a kidnaper had locked him. The youth's appearance at his home ended a determined search for him by his parents and the police.

William was questioned about the abduction by Detective Sergeant Harry Cole. He declared he had been invited to accept a job by a man who was driving by his home in an automobile and accepted the offer. When he stepped into the machine, he declared, the man slipped a chloroformed cloth over his nose, and he was put to sleep.

From that time on William's mind was a blank, he said, until he awoke in a house near Laurel, Md. When his captor relaxed his vigilance he slipped to the phone and notified Mr. Burrs, of Dent place, for whom he delivered papers, that he was being held captive and would be unable to serve his paper route.

Young Hoy declared he escaped from the room, after his captor left, and hitch-hiked his way back to Washington and home. Detective Cole took the boy to Emergency Hospital, where an examination showed that he had not been harmed. Physicians said they could detect no odors of any sleep-inducing drug on the boy's breath.

TRAFFIC LAW BILL DEBATE IN SENATE HALTED BY SMOOT

GEORGIAN RETRACTS FORMER OBJECTION

Purported Police Opposition Declared Exaggerated on Proposal.

Action on the proposed new District traffic law was defeated in the Senate again yesterday when Senator Reed Smoot (Republican), Utah, objected to an effort by Senator Hamilton F. Kean (Republican), New Jersey, to bring the measure up for consideration.

Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), Georgia, had objected to consideration of the bill previously, but he announced that he withdrew his objection and the ways seemed greased for a few moments for passage of the bill by the Senate until Senator Smoot arose and said he thought that other matters should be disposed of first.

Another Dispute Looms.

In the meantime there loomed another dispute over the provisions of the much discussed and amended traffic bill. Senators were informed that as now worded the bill would seriously hamper its enforcement because of the strict limitations placed on the functions of the police in traffic matters.

Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby, however, subsequently declared that reports of police opposition to the measure are exaggerated. The Police Department, of which he has supervision, Gen. Crosby said, is not antagonistic to the measure.

Objections Are Minimized.

Gen. Crosby and other District authorities were inclined to minimize the objections raised in an article credited to the police yesterday. All are detail matters, they said, that can be ironed out after, and if, the bill becomes a law.

The provision to take all administrative authority out of the hands of the Police Department and to leave it with the sole duty of enforcement was recommended by the traffic advisory committee and was suggested by Dr. Miller McClintock in his elaborate report on District traffic problems.

Man Dies Three Hours After Falling at Home

Falling down a flight of stairs in his home at 1055 Jefferson street northwest at noon yesterday, Samuel S. Miller, 45 years old, sustained injuries that caused his death three hours later.

Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt investigated the death and issued a certificate of accidental death. He learned that Dr. J. P. Marbury, of Emergency Hospital, was called to the house at 3:35 and that five minutes later the man was pronounced dead. Death was attributed to shock.

Boy Skates Into Car, Is Injured.

Fractures of both wrists were suffered by Harry Markowitz, 13, yesterday when he skated into an auto at C street near New Jersey avenue. William Mark, the driver, took the boy to Providence Hospital for treatment. Mark lives on Twelfth street near Newton northeast; the boy on Eighth near E southeast.
